STAFF ANSWERS · Arrival

Standard

1. Order: Yellow dot, then pink ring.
2. Colours: Two colours in the marks; the dark paper is the background, not an extra mark colour.
3. Next mark: A pink ring.
4. Again: Add or direct a yellow dot followed by a pink ring, retaining the same shape and colour order.

STAFF ANSWERS · Arrival

Stretch

1. Order: Pink ring / yellow dot / pink ring / yellow dot.
2. Dark paper: The bright yellow and pink marks stand out against the dark paper. Accept a gesture comparing marks and ground or a simple visibility explanation.
3. Again: A yellow dot followed by a pink ring, in that order, stays the same.
4. Change: Give the dot and the ring new colours and use that pair again.

STAFF ANSWERS · Exit ticket

Supported

1. Repeat: Use the same bit again.
2. Again: The pupil points to two places where their own unit appears. Record what they showed.
3. Check: The pupil locates a planned colour in their artwork, or identifies that it is missing or different. Record the actual match or difference shown.

STAFF ANSWERS · Exit ticket

Standard

1. Repeat: The pupil shows two occurrences of their own repeated unit, in the same order.

2. Check: Compare one planned shape, colour or repeat with the artwork. A clear demonstration of such a comparison is valid.

3. Choice: A pupil-owned shape, colour, repeat or placement decision. Accept a gesture to that part with a clear meaning.

STAFF ANSWERS · Exit ticket

Stretch

1. Colours: No. The dark paper is the background; A uses two bright colours for its marks.
2. Change: All three marks, in the same order each time; the whole three-mark unit is used again.
3. Check: A specific comparison, such as planned pink rings present in the work, one missing ring noticed, or an intentional colour change identified. No change is required when the chosen feature already matches.

Use one tier. Keep these answers out of pupil view until after the first response.

STAFF ANSWERS · teaching and routes

Starter: A repeats the yellow-dot/pink-ring pair. B changes the last shape to a dot, so its second pair does not match the first.

I do: The planned last shape is a pink ring. The adult's check compares the actual shape with the plan.

We do: Pink ring. The adult models reading the first pair, then every pupil chooses the last shape before the shared example is completed.

We do: A pupil-chosen unit in two or three bright colours, repeated on dark paper, with one actual shape or colour compared with the pupil's stated plan. A match, a noticed mismatch or an intentional change can be valid evidence; note what the pupil showed.

You do · Independent: A pupil-owned plan precedes a small artwork on dark paper with a repeated unit and two or three bright colours. The pupil compares one stated shape or colour in the plan with the work. Accept a matching feature, a pupil-identified mismatch with a proposed change, or an explained intentional change. Fine motor precision is not the success criterion.

You do · Supported: A chosen dot or ring used in two chosen bright colours, with the two-colour pair repeated on dark paper. The pupil identifies one planned colour and locates it in the work, or notices a difference. Record whether the choices, repetition and check were independent or prompted.

You do · Choice: The pupil selects a method, shape and two or three bright colours, then makes or directs a repeated unit on a dark ground. The review compares an actual feature with one planned shape or colour. Ready-cut shapes may remain arranged on the paper until the pupil directs an adult to glue them; the pupil's decisions are the evidence, not who controls the tool. Record C, the method chosen and the pupil's one word, phrase or reason.

You do · Aspire: A planned artwork uses a repeated unit and two or three bright colours on dark paper, with an intentional one- or two-row layout. The pupil compares one planned feature with the work and identifies how their spacing helps the shapes remain clear or separated. If they change the plan, record the original choice, actual change and reason rather than requiring a replica of the model.

Staff: mark I, S or C beside the You do response for actual independence, support or choice.
