1. A festival: Diwali, with the clue that many Hindus use small lamps.
2. A light: Good winning over bad; also accept learning or knowledge with the explained symbolic link.
3. More than one way: People can mark Diwali in different ways. An equivalent correction is valid.
4. Show care: It belongs to someone else and may matter to them; asking respects their choice and helps keep it safe. One clear reason is enough.

1. Name and meaning: At Diwali, many Hindus use lamps whose light can stand for good winning over bad or learning.

2. Check a claim: No; an object alone does not show everyone's beliefs, and people differ. A concise reason is enough.

3. Care: For example: ask before touching helps the owner keep the lamp safe; listening helps the person speaking. Accept any fitting care rule linked to who it helps.

Use one tier. Keep these answers out of pupil view until after the first response.

STAFF ANSWERS · teaching and routes

Starter: A. The bowl and wick show a lamp. A drawing alone does not show everyone who uses it, its owner or anyone's belief.

I do: Accept lamp linked to light, or light linked to good winning over bad or learning. The second link is symbolic, not a claim that light itself makes people good.

We do: Fits the card. Card A says many Hindus use small lamps. Model finding that line after pupils have chosen.

We do: 1 Fits card A. 2 Not shown; card A says practices vary and does not claim all people use the same object. 3 Not shown; card B gives no owner. 4 Fits card C. Accept a point to the relevant words, a short reason or the pupil's own equivalent.

You do · Independent: 1 Diwali. 2 A lamp used by many Hindus; accept diya. 3 Light can stand for good winning over bad or learning. 4 Ask before touching, listen respectfully, or another respectful and safe display rule. Require the object's feature linked to a meaning; copied words without the pupil showing the link are not enough. Scribe the pupil's own response if required.

You do · Supported: 1 Diwali. 2 Lamp. 3 Many Hindus. 4 Good wins over bad. 5 Ask first. Present each pair in varied left/right order; do not signal the answer. Link the pupil's chosen lamp and meaning in the final record. The frame is support, not a response to be dictated.

You do · Choice: Diwali; lamp; good wins over bad; ask first; the phrase many Hindus limits the claim. Accept a pointed lamp-to-meaning link and the pupil's own short word or gesture. Record C, the response mode chosen and the pupil's one word, phrase or reason, and the actual prompting; the adult may move cards only as directed by the pupil.

You do · Aspire: The label links lamps used by many Hindus at Diwali with good winning over bad or learning. The claim is not justified: one object cannot tell us everyone's beliefs, and practices differ. The drawing does not identify its owner. A valid care rule includes asking before touching. Require a reason, not only 'no'; accept the reason by sign, a paired symbol choice or any other response mode.

Staff: mark I, S or C beside the You do response for actual independence, support or choice.
