Useful feedback without pressure

Choose what you can check

Look at an approved sample, appearance, a pack or a label. You do not have to taste or handle food. Only taste if the adult has completed the checks and you choose to. If you do not taste, mark NOT TASTED and say what you looked at. A photo or non-food model can support the same feedback task.

Our feedback steps

1. Say what you actually checked.
2. Choose KEEP, CHANGE or NOT SURE.
3. Give a reason using that evidence.
4. Ask an adult to review anything uncertain.

FINISH: one clear view and reason, with its basis. You can point, speak, write or use a scribe. No cold calling. You may pass or answer privately.

One response record

Blank team tally

Count actual feedback responses only.
KEEP: _____
CHANGE: _____
NOT SURE: _____
Total feedback responses: _____
PASS or no response: _____ kept separately.
Separately count the tasting basis from the actual records:
TASTED: _____ NOT TASTED: _____ BASIS NOT RECORDED: _____
Do not assume that a feedback response means someone tasted.

Fictional counting example

EXAMPLE ONLY: Four people checked a pack picture without tasting. Keep 2, Change 1, Not sure 1. Total replies: 2 + 1 + 1 = 4. Tasted 0; Not tasted 4. This is made-up counting practice. It says nothing about flavour, the other six pupils or any real product result.

The adult review

What the actual feedback supports: _____
A change to consider: _____
What still needs checking: _____
Adult role and agreed action: _____
Keep the original views. A tally can guide a decision, but it does not settle food safety, permission, product quality or an award. Use [AWARD] and [QUAL] only as masks.

Words for a reason

I checked __ and did / did not taste. I chose __ because __. I am not sure about __. I need an adult to check __.
