Reference A zoom drawing

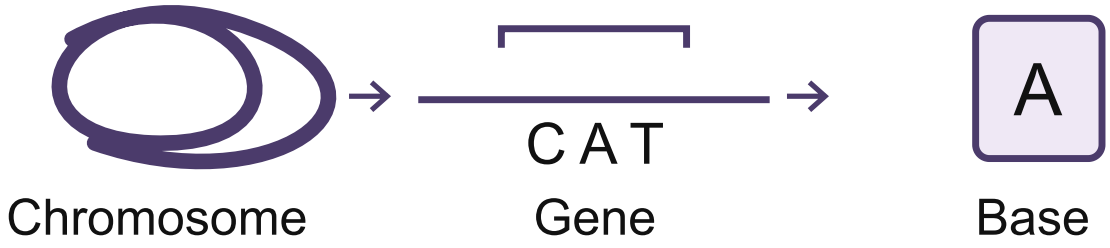

A coiled chromosome, a bracketed gene and the base A.

Reference only. The drawings are simplified and do not show scale.

Level	What the picture shows
Chromosome	A long DNA molecule packaged with proteins.
Gene	A bracketed section of the DNA.
Base	One unit in the DNA sequence, shown here as A.

Reference B explain the links

The three levels run from chromosome to gene to base.

Reference only.

Link	Explanation
Chromosome to gene	A chromosome carries a long DNA molecule. One region of that DNA can be a gene.
Gene to base	The gene has a sequence of bases. A represents one base.
Model limit	The drawing leaves out packaging proteins and most bases. The sizes are simplified.

The genome is the complete DNA set. It includes DNA from all chromosomes.

Arrival and exit Independent

Use the picture on Reference A for question 1 and the model table for questions 2–4.

1. Read the label on the last drawing.

2. Which drawing shows packed DNA?

3. What does the bracket on the DNA show?

4. How is a base related to a gene?

Exit ticket

1. How does a gene fit into a chromosome?

2. How does a base fit into a gene?
