In your book: record four brief responses in your chosen mode, unless passing.

1. Last lesson — Reason

What does an ethical reason explain?

Clue: Think about why an action is justified.

2. Last lesson — Competing needs

What concern did the booked group have?

Clue: Think about its planned activity.

3. Last lesson — Changing a judgement

What missing information could change the room decision?

Clue: Think about timing or agreement.

4. Link to today — Link to today

What should a fair response to wrongdoing consider?

Clue: Think about facts and people affected.

Starter and method strip

Starter

Authored example: someone replaces a damaged label and separately receives a one-session pause from using the label tools.

Question: Which action is repair rather than the imposed consequence?

In your book: record one brief choice or reason, unless passing.

Method

Attend to one model. Locate its claim, evidence and explanation.

In the label example, replacement addresses the damaged item. A brief pause may protect safe use, but it needs a reason and review. Neither proves that trust has returned. Forgiveness is a possible personal response; it is not a demand or evidence that every consequence must disappear.

In your book: keep one useful model link or vocabulary note, marked “model”; no copying is required.

Feedback codes

VF = verbal feedback; WS = worked with support; I = independent; NS = one specific next step; E = evidence on the evidence app; R = responded: the loop is closed; // = self-edit point; ? = read this back to me.

J1 · Christian source perspectives

One Christian account links hope with forgiveness, kindness and care. In a Christian parable, a person repeatedly asks an unjust judge for justice; the judge eventually responds to the persistence. Some believers find reasons to seek justice and show mercy in these sources. The unjust judge is not a model of fairness. Interpretations and decisions vary within Christianity.

J2 · Humanist ethical account

This humanist account considers evidence, empathy, discussion and consequences. Applied to wrongdoing, this can support asking what happened, who was harmed and which response could reduce harm. That application is classroom reasoning from the account, not a claim that all humanists favour the same sanction.

J3 · Authored community case; not testimony

A club member ignored a clear rule and marked a shared display board with permanent ink. The member admits doing it and offers to help replace the damaged panel. The display group lost preparation time. The club rule allows a temporary pause from using the materials while safe use is reviewed. The group does not want a face-to-face apology meeting.

J4 · Response options

A: impose a permanent ban without hearing anyone. B: hear those affected, arrange suitable repair and use the temporary pause with a review date. C: remove every consequence if the member says sorry. Judge the options using evidence, proportionality, safety and respect. Nobody must apologise, forgive, reconcile or meet. A school activity is not a court or legal ruling.

We Do

1. Use J3 and J4. Locate the admitted action and the harm.
2. Compare B and C: record what each does about repair, future use and the group's boundary.
3. Give one reason a consequence should be proportionate and reviewed.

In your book: record one guided example and one pupil-owned explanation or correction.

Recall after first try

Keep covered until after the first try.

Last lesson used a quiet-room case to link a decision, case evidence, a principle and consequences. Care and humanist reason/empathy could support concern for others; shared principles did not guarantee identical decisions. Missing timing or consent information could change a judgement.
