Staff answers and decision rules

Examples are adult models. They are never prefilled pupil evidence.

Arrival

Naming, pointing to or confirming the spoken name is acceptable. A pupil does not need to spell the name from memory.

Starter

The curve bends smoothly; the zigzag changes direction sharply. A feeling linked to either feature is a possible reading, not a fixed rule.

I do

Ask: 'Which is a fact from the card: he moved cut shapes, or everyone must feel calm?' Expected: he moved cut shapes. If unclear, reread that sentence and point to the original class shapes.

We do

B. Ask the maker. If a pupil selects A, model two different readings of the same blue shape. Parallel check: 'Could a blue shape show joy to its maker?' Expected: yes, if that is their intended meaning. Move on when the pupil can identify a feature and allow another reading.

Create

Example only: Matisse cut painted paper and moved shapes. I tried three own shapes close and apart. I chose apart because it feels calm to me. This is the pupil's possible method link, not a claim about the artist's mood.

Review

A useful artist fact is that he moved cut shapes to test a layout. A personal view is that a pupil's wide gaps seem calm. Both belong in the log with their different purposes clear.

Exit

Example only: The artist is Henri Matisse. He cut painted paper and moved shapes. I tried three own shapes apart. I chose wide gaps because they feel calm to me.

Teacher example

Teacher model only: Matisse cut painted paper and moved shapes. I used the idea of moving my own shapes. I chose wide gaps because they suggest calm to me.

Teacher model only: I kept the same three shapes and changed their spacing. Someone else may read my piece in a different way. The artist's private mood is not known from our description.

Artist details and own response

BUILD Spring 1 Week 3 Monday 18 January 2027 P5 Year A Explore

Henri Matisse - He cut shapes from painted paper and moved the shapes to try a layout. In my own art, I could move shapes apart to suggest calm, or put them close to suggest energy. Those are my own readings. They do not tell us what he felt.

Own response

Keep one artist fact separate from a personal reading. Accept an original response with a method link and a reason. The class model is never pupil evidence. Read the card aloud and scribe exact confirmed words when needed.
