Starter and method strip

Starter

Two organisers agree to offer help. One refers to a sacred teaching; the other refers to reducing harm using evidence.

Question: Does agreeing on an action prove their reasons are identical?

In your book: record one brief choice or reason, unless passing.

Method

Attend to one model. Locate its claim, evidence and explanation.

In the two-organiser example, the similarity is the action of helping. The difference is the stated authority: a sacred teaching in one account and evidence about harm in the other. That difference does not show that religious people ignore evidence or that non-religious people lack values. A careful comparison names the actual reasons given.

In your book: keep one useful model link or vocabulary note, marked “model”; no copying is required.

Feedback codes

VF = verbal feedback; WS = worked with support; I = independent; NS = one specific next step; E = evidence on the evidence app; R = responded: the loop is closed; // = self-edit point; ? = read this back to me.

Compare the possible religious and non-religious responses in V4 to V3. Give one similarity, one difference in authority or reasoning, and a justified practical response. Use V1 and V2 as evidence. Use worldview, religious, non-religious and authority accurately. State what remains uncertain and acknowledge diversity; no personal worldview declaration is required.

Help: Compare the reasons actually supplied. Start with “In this account…” or “Some believers…” rather than a claim about everyone. A neutral alternative is to analyse the V3 organiser’s decision using V4 as supplied positions.

Blank record: Shared concern [ ] / V1 reason and authority [ ] / V2 reason and authority [ ] / Difference [ ] / Case application [ ] / Uncertainty and diversity [ ].

V1 · Christian source account

The adapted Christian caring parable describes a helper crossing a community boundary to care for a traveller. Some believers treat this sacred-text teaching as an authority for neighbour-love and mercy. Christians also reason about evidence and consequences; reading a sacred text does not make every practical decision identical.

V2 · Humanist source account

This humanist organisation describes a non-religious approach using evidence, reason, empathy and discussion. It values wellbeing in this life and concern for people, other animals and the world. Some humanists use these grounds when deciding how to help. This account does not represent every non-religious person.

V3 · Authored community case; not testimony

A community food store has one parcel left today. One household requested it first; another has no food available until tomorrow. The organiser has checked both requests, but does not know whether the first household has another safe source today. A delivery is expected tomorrow, but is not guaranteed. No pupil is asked about food or family circumstances.

V4 · Two authored applications; not quotations

Application A uses the Christian caring account to argue for attending to urgent need beyond one's own group. Application B uses the humanist account to compare likely harm, listen to both households and check alternatives. Both suggest checking the missing fact before deciding. These are possible applications of the sources, not invented testimony or claims that every believer or humanist would choose them.

Keep covered until after the first try.

Last lesson distinguished justice, punishment, repair and forgiveness. A proportionate response used checked facts, repair and a reviewed boundary. The affected group could decline a meeting. Forgiveness or an apology was not compulsory and did not automatically remove consequences.
