These six cards are new teaching explanations. They describe purposes and types of remembrance. No person’s testimony, story, words or image is reproduced, paraphrased or invented.

People warning and responsibility

Remembrance means taking time to remember people and learn about the past. In this lesson we consider the people, the warning and the responsibility today. The Holocaust was the Nazi-led persecution and murder of six million European Jews. Other people also faced Nazi persecution and murder. Their experiences were not all the same.

R1: significance includes recognising full lives, identities and communities rather than reducing people to a number or to victimhood. No invented life or survivor story is needed to make that point.

R2: warning means learning about prejudice, exclusion, unjust rules and human decisions. Genocide was not inevitable. Do not turn every present-day slight into a Holocaust analogy or imply that remembering predicts what will happen.

R3: responsibility is shared across society. Safe learner-level examples include accurate learning, checking a claim, respectful language and trusted adult help for abuse. Do not require confrontation or imply that a pupil is personally responsible for preventing genocide.

Illustrative structured answer

This is an original teacher-written explanation, attributed to no historical person. It contains no survivor account.

Remembering matters because people who were murdered should not be reduced to a number (R1). Education can explain how prejudice and choices caused harm (R2/R6). This can help people check false claims and seek safe help. A memorial may name people, while a shared day creates time to learn (R4/R5). However, a ceremony alone cannot stop hatred. Responsibility continues in careful speech, checking facts and safe reporting routes (R3).

The model shows purpose, example, reason and limit. Pupils must also include the national day’s date and purpose in their own answer, using R5. Do not judge length or emotional display as understanding.

Staff answers for forms and the national day

Type	Purpose and a limit
Memorial place or object | R4	Can honour lives and support reflection. Names may identify individuals. Accurate context is needed; an object alone cannot tell a whole history.
Shared day | R5	Creates shared time for remembrance and learning, in public or private. One date cannot replace ongoing learning and responsibility.
Education | R6	Can provide accurate context, examine decisions and challenge false claims. It needs care and does not guarantee prevention by itself.

Holocaust Memorial Day is marked in the UK on 27 January each year. It remembers those murdered in the Holocaust, other victims of Nazi persecution and people murdered in later genocides. It offers time to learn and reflect on prejudice and hatred today. Our lesson is on 26 January, the day before.

The national day keeps the Holocaust central while also remembering other Nazi-persecution victims and later genocides. These histories are not identical. Do not flatten them into one event or compare degrees of suffering. No later genocide or named organisation needs to be introduced in this lesson.

Different communities and individuals may use religious or non-religious forms, or choose no public event. Avoid assigning one fixed ritual to every member of a faith or group. A learner may evaluate a form without agreeing to practise it.

Reasoned links

Accept memorial → people because names acknowledge individual lives; education → warning because it explains context and decisions; day → responsibility because it creates time to reflect on what follows. These are examples, not exclusive matches. Education or a memorial with context can serve several purposes.

Which best explains remembrance? A: One ceremony stops hatred for good. B: It helps honour people and learn from history, while responsibility continues. C: Everyone must feel the same sadness.

B. A gives a guarantee that remembrance cannot provide. C wrongly requires one emotional response. Check both learners privately for a reason. If needed, model purpose versus guarantee, then use the parallel check before independent work.

A memorial contains names. Does it explain the whole history on its own? No. Names can honour individuals, but accurate context and education are also needed. Ask the learner to link the form to a purpose and name a limit.

What to retain

In your book, answer: Why does remembering matter today? Explain the people, the warning and the responsibility. Use one remembrance type and say how it serves a purpose. Include the national day's date and purpose, one limit, and one safe responsibility today. Keep card codes and your own reasons.

Accept concise structured work using the learner's chosen mode. Supported may use a frame or exact directed scribing; record help. Aspire adds comparison or a more precise limit. A shared answer is not both learners' evidence. No visible sadness, ritual, pledge or disclosure is required.

Offer to the Communication portfolio. Record R only after the learner gives an idea, an adult audience replies with one NS (next step), and the learner responds in the same colour, on the same page or usual mode. Record E only after actual banking. Keep the response mode and actual help. A partner answer does not establish both learners' understanding.

Care

Agree a discreet PAUSE signal, supervising adult, quiet place and private return check before teaching. Keep both learners supervised. If a sole adult cannot supervise separate spaces, use a calm place in the room or pause the whole group while seeking usual support. Never send a learner away alone.

For distress, stop the demand, acknowledge it calmly and offer the agreed route without sanction or a public explanation. Do not probe or insist on a history recap while the learner is upset. Follow the school's existing safeguarding arrangements for disclosures and use the appropriate private record.

Interrupt antisemitism calmly and firmly. Name the harm without repeating a slur. Hostility towards Jewish people is unacceptable. Correct a falsehood briefly and follow school procedures. Do not debate Holocaust denial or require learners to defend victims' rights. Victims were not responsible for their persecution.

For flippancy or laughter, stop and reset respectful listening. A nervous response is possible, but harm still needs addressing. Follow up privately, check those affected and use existing procedures for targeted, repeated or serious incidents. Avoid shaming or guessing motives.

Offer the neutral quiet task and a private readiness check. It is not evidence of the remembrance outcome. Record deferred work honestly and offer a later supported return. A partner's answer or participation in a ceremony does not establish the learner's understanding.

Quiet answer: 08:30 reading, 10:00 break, 12:00 lunch, 14:00 club; pencil/book and cup/plate by use. Keep supervision and private re-entry.

Source and care boundary

Public guidance on the national day's purpose and sensitive history teaching was checked outside this bundle. It informs these new explanations, not reproduced text. No named organisation, website, imagery or survivor testimony is supplied. The owner's care rules control the lesson.
