Route Aspire

Learning outcome: Evaluate the significance of a person who created change.

1 Keep the same four-row grid and paragraph. Compare two tests: why does one have stronger support?

2 Explain how shared work and the court case limit a claim about one person. They do not erase her part.

3 Defend a score that another pupil could reasonably change. Explain how equal weights affect the total, or what extra evidence you would need.

Your own finish

In your book, complete your own four-row grid. Give each criterion a score from 0 to 3, a card code, a reason and a limit. Add the scores out of 12. Write a short paragraph with your overall view, two facts with codes, your strongest criterion, a link to now and one limit. Explain why the evidence supports your view.

Paragraph frame

I judge Rosa Parks to be ____ significant because ____. For changed things at the time, I gave ____ out of 3 because ____ (card __). My strongest criterion is ____ because ____ (card __). This still matters now because ____. However, ____. My total of ____ out of 12 supports my view because ____. The score is a judgement, not a fact.
