Scheme outcome

Perform for an audience.

Today I can

I can use my agreed role and cues.

I can perform or direct for a real class or invited staff audience.

I can record my own part and real feedback.

Words for this lesson audience: The people who watch or listen.

cue: A sign for a start, pause or end.

contribution: Your own part in shared work.

feedback: A useful notice about what happened.

Working safely

Use a made-up story. Keep your own space. Stop on the open hand. You can sit, stay silent or direct. You may share with just the adult.

Supported

Pick a small role or direct an adult.

Use our four short story parts.

Share with one class member or invited staff member.

Confirm your real part and one choice.

Independent

Use the actual story outline and your role.

Share with clear cues for the allowed audience.

Ask one listener to notice a skill.

Log your part, actual audience, choice and real feedback.

Aspire

Complete the same core share.

Help the group use a clear pause and end cue.

Explain how a chosen skill helps the audience.

Optional next level: check one real skill goal and keep your own view of the result.

Model step 1

Use a calm start cue and safe wide hand poses for the first plan.

Model step 2

Show close hands. Say: Our imagined space is smaller. Pause.

Model step 3

Offer a small wave and repeat the chosen move together.

Model step 4

Hold a comfortable final pose, relax and ask the present listener about one feature.

Your own task

Use the safe plan you agreed. Share with the class and invited staff only.

Show your real role. Keep a note of what you did.

The adult model is an example. Your arts log must show your real choice.

A smaller show space with words

The group plan wide moves. The imagined space gets smaller. A planner asks for ideas. The group test small hand moves, choose one and end together. A narrator uses short lines to mark the change and the new plan.

What makes the change and response clear?

How could a short line or pause help our audience?

A smaller show space in silence

The group begin with wide hand poses. A point to the word Change marks a smaller space. Each offers a small move. They choose one and repeat it together, then hold a final pose. The intended meaning is explained after the share.

How does the group show a choice without speech?

Which feature would you keep in your own piece, and why?
