Plan a product/service to sell.

Choose one useful offer

A product is something a customer receives. A service is help or work done for a customer. Choose one offer for this plan. You may continue an earlier idea or change it with a reason.

A customer and a need

Describe an intended customer by type, such as a beginner grower. Explain a useful need the offer could meet. This is an idea about an audience, not proof that a real person has agreed to buy.

Resources to check

A resource can be a material, equipment, time, a skill or adult help. Sort what the idea needs and what the adult must confirm. Available means checked; otherwise write to check. A sketch or empty-pot mockup shows planning, not a finished product.

Invented choices only

Invented offer	Customer need and checks
Product: labelled starter-plant pot with care card	A beginner grower may need clear instructions. Adult checks suitable stock, materials and accurate advice.
Service: help label and check plants	A person may need help keeping labels clear. Adult defines the safe task, time and supervision.

Choose one offer for each plan. The model customer need is a possibility, not confirmed demand. Use a real group idea if one exists, or change the idea with a reason. No sale or contact occurs.
