Staff answers & diagnostic guide — Build the studio brief

Pathway: BASE · Week 4 Part 2 · Big question: How do we plan our relief panel with three clear choices?

Starter answer & explanation

Question: Why does a maker draw a simple plan. First cutting up the big stiff board?

Correct: So you know where every piece fits and do not waste good card — Yes. A five-minute plan saves your best card and foil.

Guided team check (We do) answers

Q1: How many colours should we pick for our relief panel palette so it stays bold? -> Two or three dark and light colours (like black, chrome, and rust) (Yes. A tight colour palette looks strong and clear.)

Q2: Do you need to glue heavy foil onto your paper plan sheet today? -> No, draw the shapes and use simple lines and labels to show where foil goes (Yes. Today is your clear blueprint map; we build on stiff board next.)

Q3: What does a good label line look like on an art plan? -> One straight line from the part to the word outside the drawing (Yes. Straight pointer lines keep the drawing easy to read.)

Question: What is a studio brief in art?

Correct: A clear plan that names your shape, art tools, and colours. First you build — Yes. Your brief tells you exactly what to make.
