Tier pack: Independent route — Three studio goals and baseline audit

Pathway: SUMMIT · Week 1 Part 1 · Big question: How do we audit our current studio skills across four visual disciplines to set three measurable targets?

Independent route studio steps

Step 1: Execute the four-quadrant baseline audit on your A3 studio sheet using a consistent personal symbol or architectural motif.

Step 2: Annotate each quadrant with a brief diagnostic critique identifying one technical strength and one control gap.

Step 3: Write three measurable studio targets specifying the medium, technique, and evidence you will produce by Week 4.

Success check

Four-quadrant audit completed with diagnostic annotations and three measurable targets.

Key words helper

• baseline audit: An honest practical test of your current studio strengths and gaps at the start of a project.

• tonal value: The exact degree of lightness or darkness on a scale from pure white to deep black.

• contour: A perceptive line that tracks both the outer boundary and internal form of an object.

• criterion: A specific standard used to judge technical quality in artwork.

• target: A concrete, testable skill goal you commit to developing over the unit.

Review checklist

[ ] Check that all four quadrants have a diagnostic note underneath.

[ ] Verify that each of your three studio targets names a specific medium and measurable outcome.

[ ] Place your baseline audit sheet at the front of your studio portfolio.