Source and check

This is one Christian account of hope, not every believer's view.

The source links faith with hope and care for people in need.

A belief-based hope is not proof that a hard situation has ended.

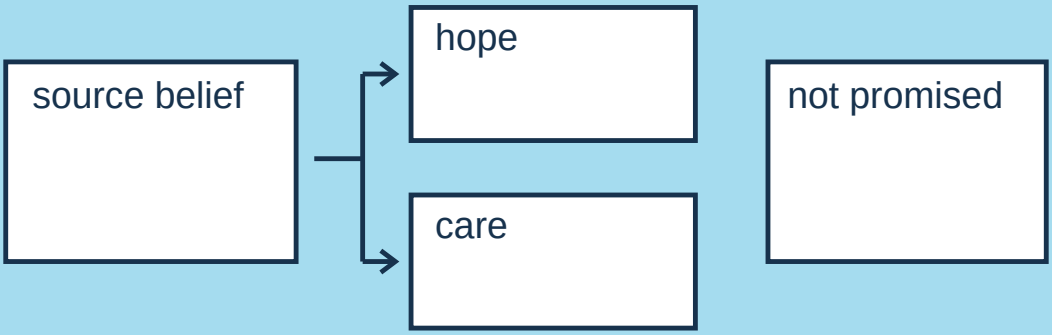

Use the supplied third-person sources. No personal belief or loss story is needed. You may use the neutral case to explain a source idea, or pass.

A source-belief box links to hope and care boxes. A separate blank box is labelled not promised. No religious figure is drawn.

pain or hardship that a person faces.

A plain task card has a heavy weight beside it. It stands for hardship; no hurt person is shown.

a wish or trust that good can come.

An arrow points from a plain box towards an open space. It suggests a possible good future, not a promised result.
