Green and amber behaviour cards

All examples are made up. Sort these actions using the words Green and Amber. Give a reason in your book, by typing or with your usual aid. Do not sort real people.

Card	Invented action
1	A friend asks before sharing another person's drawing and accepts no.
2	A friend listens when someone wants a quiet break.
3	A friend is pleased that someone enjoys a different activity too.
4	A friend keeps choosing the task without asking what the other person wants.
5	A friend shares a drawing after the other person has said no.
6	A friend says sorry for an unkind reply but keeps doing the same thing.

What the words mean

Green means this action shows care or respect. Amber means pause, check and ask for help if needed. Judge actions in context, not a whole person. One kind act cannot cancel a concern.

Amber never means put up with harm. If someone feels unsafe, get a trusted adult at once. Do not wait to finish a sort. These labels are learning prompts, not a safety test.

One invented scene

Choosing a shared activity

Two invented young people plan a quiet craft task. One asks to use a drawing. The other says no. The first person accepts this and chooses a new idea. Later one keeps choosing each next step without asking. The other wants a fair turn to choose. No names, personal details or unkind words are shown.

Visible model

Accepting no is a green flag because it respects choice. Choosing every step without asking is an amber flag because both people need a say. They could pause and agree a turn each, or ask school staff to help. Judge each action; one green action does not cancel the amber concern.

Choice B Scene map

Make a two-part scene map. Identify one green and one amber action, give a reason for each, then suggest a respectful next step and help route.

Choice C Advice note

Write an advice note about the same scene. Explain one green and one amber action with reasons, then give a respectful next step and help route.

Shared success checks

Identify one green and one amber action in the invented scene. Give a reason for each. Suggest a respectful next step and a trusted adult help route. Judge actions in context, not a whole person.

A model next step

They could say, Can we each choose one step? If that is not respected, they can stop the task and ask trusted school staff in private.

Use your book, Type instead, a usual aid or an exact scribe. No personal story or public answer is needed. You can pass or use the supported pause agreed with staff.

Two equal task choices

Make scene map B or advice note C about the same invented scene. Both identify a green and an amber action with reasons, a respectful next step and a trusted adult help route. Use a book, Type instead, an aid or an exact scribe.

Help and a quiet pause

Point to HELP or ask a trusted adult in private. You can pass or use the pause signal agreed with staff. An adult supports the known safe route. No public reason is needed. Do not leave alone. Return with support, use a calm task or catch up privately. School staff pass any disclosure to the safeguarding lead through school procedure.
