A first response to change

GROW Spring 1 Week 1 Wednesday 6 January 2027 P5 Year A Explore

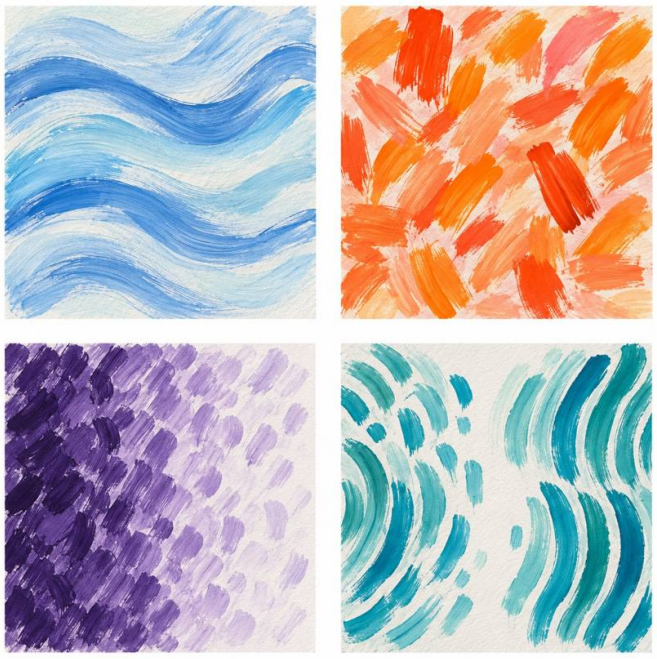

I can develop my first response, test a change and record how an artist's idea helped me.

Weekly outcome: Explore how artists express resilience and change.

I make or direct an original response to resilience or change.

I test one adjustment and describe its effect.

I add evidence and a personal view to my arts log.

Original teacher models. These are possible readings. You may see or hear a different feeling.

Choose paint, sound or silent movement. GROW can also choose original words or drama. Work may be small. Ask for help or take a calm pause.

My task and routes

GROW Spring 1 Week 1 Wednesday 6 January 2027 P5 Year A Explore

The main task

Develop your own response. Test one change. Choose the version to keep.

Use a quiet or silent route if you prefer. You may pause or ask for help.

Supported

Choose one change from two options. Adult models only its first step. Make or direct the rest and complete 'I changed ... It helped because ...' orally or through a scribe.

Independent

Make your first response. Test one change. Choose which version to keep. Say how an artist's method helped you.

Aspire

Use two features in your piece. Say how they work together. How might someone else read your art? Keep or change a feature. Say why. The next level task is optional.

Artist descriptions and comparison

Read these descriptions aloud. No copy of either artist's work is supplied. Use a general method to make your own response.

Henri Matisse Cut-outs Later career

Henri Matisse made paintings and later developed cut-outs as artworks in their own right. Assistants painted paper. He cut shapes and directed their arrangement. The shapes could move while he tested an idea. This gives us a way to discuss changing a method and revising a design.

What could Matisse change before the shapes were fixed?

How might moving a shape help an artist keep an idea going?

Alma Thomas The Eclipse 1970

Alma Thomas developed an abstract painting style using repeated coloured marks. Nature and space helped her find ideas. In The Eclipse, made in 1970, a dark blue centre sits within rings of colour. The centre is off to one side. This arrangement can suggest a moment of movement and change.

Which two details does the description give us?

How could repeating marks help us show a change?

A fact comes from the description. A personal reading starts with This suggests ... to me. Art can show change without telling us an artist's private feelings.
