

Knowledge Organiser (GROW W5): Was it significant?

Humanities Aut 1 · 2026–27 · Workbook outcome: Evaluate the significance of a person or event.

Key Word	Definition
Modelled:	Modelled: the works closing. How many: about eleven hundred jobs. How long: the site stood empty for thirty years. How different: the town would have kept growing without it, so this is a change, not a drift. Two numbers, one comparison, judgement holds.
Rewritten together:	Rewritten together: the dock opening was significant, because it brought work to about four thousand people, which is why the town was still built around it fifty years later.

Key Facts

- Two weeks ago you explained why people moved and what changed. Today you judge how much a change mattered.
- The three tests are: how many, how long, and how different afterwards.

Arrival Task

Retrieving the tests

1) Two weeks ago you explained why people moved and what changed. Today you judge how much a change mattered.

2) The three tests are: how many, how long, and how different afterwards.

A judgement that does not hold

Two judgements about the same event, the opening of a dock. Judgement A: “The dock opening was significant because everybody has heard of it.” Judgement B: “The dock opening was significant because it brought work to about four thousand people, and the town was still built around it fifty years later.”

Try it: take Judgement A and ask how many, how long, how different. Notice that none of the three has an answer in it.

We Do 1: Find what is wrong with this judgement

Sentence 1: “It was significant because it was in the papers for weeks.”

Sentence 2: “It was significant because about four thousand people were affected.”

Sentence 3: “It was significant because everyone still talks about it.”

We Do 2: Correct the error together

We rewrite one sentence as a class. Everyone drafts on a whiteboard first and we hold up together, so the first draft heard does not become everybody drafts. The sentence to correct is the one about the papers. Keep its claim. Replace what it offers as evidence.

The model

Modelled: the works closing. How many: about eleven hundred jobs. How long: the site stood empty for thirty years. How different: the town would have kept growing without it, so this is a change, not a drift. Two numbers, one comparison, judgement holds.

Rewritten together: the dock opening was significant, because it brought work to about four thousand people, which is why the town was still built around it fifty years later.

Check yourself

- Check yourself: does your evidence answer one of the three tests?
- Check yourself: is there a link phrase joining your evidence to your claim?
- Check yourself: have you avoided fame as a reason?

From the lesson sheet

Was it significant?

SoW: 'GROW Weekly - Autumn'!C50 — "Evaluate the significance of a person or event."

Learning objective: I can judge how significant an event was using how many, how long and how different, and I can spot and repair a judgement that rests on fame.

No personal or family history is required. Every task can be completed from the supplied event cards.

Significance record

Claim → evidence → link. Fame is not one of the three tests.

The first row is done for you, from the sentence we rewrote together. It is in italics so you know it is not yours.

Independent Work – Stretch

One event judged, plus the flawed sentence rewritten and its test named.

One event judged, plus the flawed sentence rewritten and the test it now answers named.

Event	Test used	My evidence	My judgement sentence
the dock opening	how many · how long	about 4000 people, 50 years	significant, because it brought work to about 4000 people, which is why the town was still built around it fifty years later

Exit Ticket – Stretch

1) Read your judgement to a partner. The listener says back which test your evidence answered.

2) Did the listener name a different test, or none? Change one phrase so the evidence points where you meant. That change is your influence.

3) Next week you plan a structured account, and this judgement is the kind of sentence it will end on.
