Teacher and cover plan — Present and sequence the studio portfolio

Pathway: TRACK · Week 7 Part 1 · Big question: How do we select, sequence, and annotate our studio studies to tell a clear story of artistic growth?

Learning goals and studio kit

• Sequence your Weeks 1-6 studio pages in logical order from initial media tasters to resolved identity piece.

• Mount your strongest development studies and final piece with clean margins and technical title slips.

• Write a reflective portfolio summary evaluating your strongest technique, compositional choices, and next studio target.

Studio kit: Full weeks 1-6 studio folders, A3/A4 backing boards, portfolio contents/reflection sheets, glue sticks, black fineliners, title slips

Arrival and starter

Arrival: When someone opens an artist's portfolio, why is seeing the early test grids and rough thumbnails next to the final piece so impressive?

Starter question: What turns a loose pile of drawings into a coherent, professional studio portfolio?

Teacher model (I do)

Step 1: Audit and sequence the pages: I lay out my sheets from Week 1 to Week 6 across the table in chronological studio order and number the corners.

Step 2: Mount and label key evidence: I frame my final identity piece on a dark backing card and check every study page has a clear title and medium label.

Step 3: Write the portfolio synthesis review: I complete my front portfolio review sheet, linking my Week 1/2 skill trials to my final piece and setting one target for next unit.

Practice routes (Supported / Independent / Aspire)

Supported: Pages sequenced 1-5, final piece mounted, and front review sheet completed.

Independent: Sequenced and annotated portfolio, mounted final piece, written synthesis review, and peer walkthrough.

Aspire: Double-mounted portfolio with curatorial foreword and cross-referenced technical annotations.

TA and cover notes

TA focus: Provide printed desk maps numbered 1 to 5 so pupils can lay out their sheets in order before clipping them into their portfolio wallets.

Staff prep: Staff preparation only: review a short guide on portfolio curation, mounting standards, and reflective synthesis.
