Two worldviews and difficulty

Compare how two worldviews respond to difficulty.

Resilience & Change

One invented situation

A familiar activity moves to a different time.

A person feels unsure and needs a new routine.

You may point, speak, pass or ask for a quiet pause.
No personal account is needed.

Christianity

Many Christians believe God cares in hard times.

A person may pray, think through choices and take a kind practical step.

Trusted people, trained helpers or a church community may support.

Humanism

Humanism is nonreligious and does not rely on gods.

A person may use experience, evidence, reason and compassion to plan a step.

Trusted people, trained helpers or a community may support.

What can be the same

Both may think, plan, show kindness and seek practical help.

Christians also use reason.

Humanists also have values and supportive communities.

What can be different

The Christian example includes belief in God and prayer.

The Humanist example uses a nonreligious approach.

People within each worldview may respond differently.

Our comparison

Aspect	Same	Different
Understanding difficulty
Choosing an action
Finding support

Read one row at a time.

Our talk

Both examples show ____.

A difference is ____.

The cards support this because ____.

Your short paragraph

Both examples include ____.

One difference is ____.

Support may help by ____.

Write 3 or 4 short sentences, or tell an adult what to scribe.
Compare the cards without stating your own belief.

Exit

Give one fair similarity or difference.

Which card detail supports it?

Neither worldview guarantees difficulty will disappear.