How can beliefs help when a plan must change?

Today I can… ☐ I can link a belief to a possible response. ☐ I can use a detail from a source. ☐ I can keep the claim small and fair.

Source and check

A belief or value can guide a response to change.

We can suggest what a person could do without guessing their worldview.

Support can include facts, care, safe help, rest or a new plan. It is not a promise that all hardship ends.

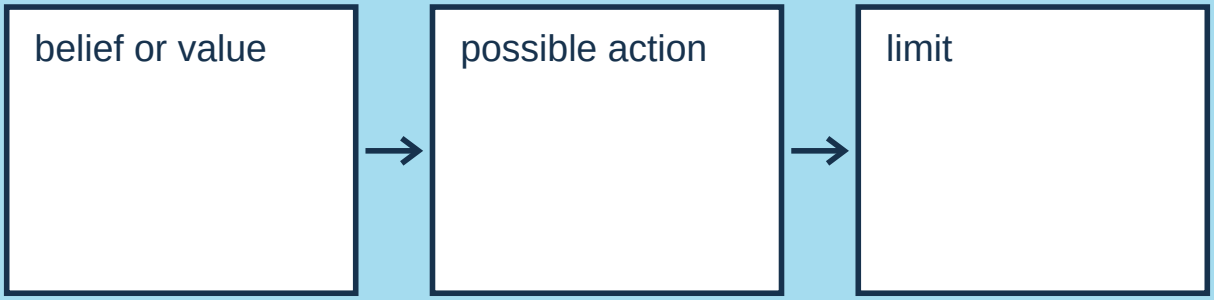

Use the supplied third-person sources. No personal belief or loss story is needed. You may use the neutral case to explain a source idea, or pass.

Three empty boxes labelled belief or value, possible action, and limit are linked. No personal belief or completed answer is shown.

an idea a person accepts as true.

An idea card points to a tick in a plain thought bubble. It means an idea accepted as true, not a claim about a pupil.

change

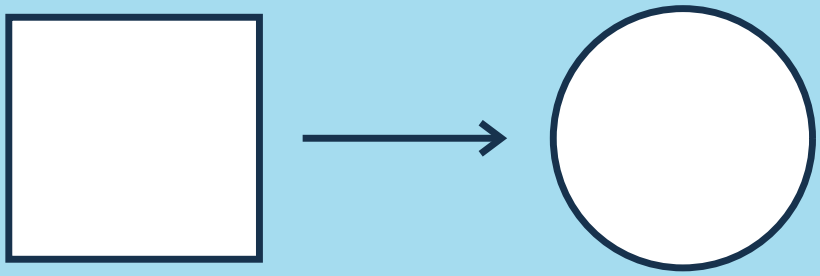

when something becomes different.

Two plain shapes are joined by an arrow. The second has a different outline.

find ways to deal with something hard.

A plain person shape stands beside a short step and a help sign. It shows one manageable step with support.

help that meets a need.

Two simple hands hold an empty task card. They stand for help, not a rescue scene.
