Learning outcome: Plan and write a structured historical account.

Enquiry: How did the campaign grow, and why did it matter?

The Montgomery bus boycott took place in Alabama, USA, in 1955–1956. Black riders faced racist seating rules. Earlier requests, Parks's arrest, shared protest and a separate legal case all help explain the campaign. Your account will link the setting, reasons, events, results and why it mattered.

You may point, write, type, speak privately or direct a scribe. Reading aloud and public answers are optional. You may pass.

Today I can

I can plan all five parts of the campaign account.

I can draft events in date order and explain reasons and results.

I can explain why it mattered, with evidence and a limit.

Our shared plan

Plan Builder chooses a fact. Link Checker asks where it belongs and why. Swap and rotate. Use facts A–F and the dates bank. A fact may help more than one paragraph if you explain its role.

Your own work

In your book, make your own five-part plan: background, causes, key events in order, consequences and significance. Then draft five short paragraphs from it. Use at least three dated events in order, card codes, a cause-and-effect link and the separate court case. Explain why the campaign mattered and one limit. Keep one edit and your reason. There is no word target.

Choose one route. The six fact cards, paragraph guide and draft frame follow. Use the dates and connectives bank beside them. Print only the pages needed.

Use the quiet signal to ask the adult for a pause. Use the agreed supervised place. No public reason is needed. Return with one small card check or a private recap when ready.

Route Supported

Learning outcome: Plan and write a structured historical account.

1 Use the planner and all six cards with exact adult reading if helpful. Plan one heading at a time in your book, using key words and codes.

2 Use the dates bank to place at least three events in order. Keep a cause, the court case, results and a limit.

3 Use the frame or direct a scribe for five very short paragraphs. Keep your own ideas. Make one edit and say why.

Your own finish

In your book, make your own five-part plan: background, causes, key events in order, consequences and significance. Then draft five short paragraphs from it. Use at least three dated events in order, card codes, a cause-and-effect link and the separate court case. Explain why the campaign mattered and one limit. Keep one edit and your reason. There is no word target.

Route Independent

Learning outcome: Plan and write a structured historical account.

1 Make a five-part plan with key facts and card codes. Select dates and connective words that help your explanation.

2 Draft five short paragraphs. Explain causes, ordered events, results and significance. Keep the court route separate and the shared work in view.

3 Check the dates, because links and limit. Improve one part and give a reason. No fixed word count is needed.

Route Aspire

Learning outcome: Plan and write a structured historical account.

1 Keep the same plan and five-part draft. Link paragraphs so the reader can follow how the campaign developed.

2 Weigh shared protest and legal action without treating either as the only cause. Explain how daily travel changed and also helped sustain action.

3 Make the significance precise: one influence among many. Revise an overclaim or weak link, then explain the improvement.

Facts for a historical account

A–F are new factual teaching summaries based on our earlier lessons. No old text, speech, testimony or picture is copied. The model opening is newly written by the lesson author. It is not a quote.

A A setting and reasons for change

Before December 1955; requests in 1954

Montgomery bus rules treated Black riders unfairly. These rules had lasted for years. In 1954, the Women's Political Council asked for fairer bus treatment. Little changed. These grievances gave people reasons to protest.

Earlier learning: Week 2 S1; Week 3 C/F.

B An arrest helped set off action

1 December 1955

Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on a Montgomery bus. Police arrested her. Organisers then called for people to stay off buses on 5 December. The arrest was a trigger, not the only cause.

Earlier learning: Week 2 context; Week 3 A; Week 4 B.

Which part of your plan could use this fact? What reason or link would you explain?

C Many people sustained the boycott

From 5 December 1955, during 1955–1956

The boycott began on 5 December 1955. Many Black residents avoided the buses. They walked or shared rides. Volunteers and local groups raised funds and arranged lifts. Shared effort helped the campaign last.

Earlier learning: Week 2 S1/S3; Week 3 E; Week 4 C.

D A separate legal route

5 June and 13 November 1956

Four Black women continued the case Browder v. Gayle. Parks was not a plaintiff. Federal judges ruled against bus segregation on 5 June. The US Supreme Court upheld the ruling on 13 November. Legal action mattered alongside protest.

Earlier learning: Week 2 S4; Week 3 P1; Week 4 D.

Which part of your plan could use this fact? What reason or link would you explain?

E The boycott ended and buses changed

20 and 21 December 1956

After the court order reached Montgomery, the boycott ended on 20 December. People returned to integrated buses on 21 December 1956. The bus seating rule had changed. This did not end racism or every unfair rule.

Earlier learning: Week 2 S5; Week 3 B; Week 4 D.

F Why the campaign matters

After December 1956, in later years

The campaign showed how shared protest could last. Its networks and example helped later civil rights work. Parks's part mattered, but so did many residents, organisers and the court case. This was one influence among many, not the end of racism.

Earlier learning: Week 3 D/G; Week 4 C/D.

Your paragraph plan for the boycott

Humanities | GROW | Spring 1 Week 5 | HUM-GROW-S1-W05

Learning outcome: Plan and write a structured historical account.

Copy five headings in your book. Add key words and card codes under each. Plan first, then write short paragraphs. This guide is not a write-on sheet.

Paragraph	What to plan	Cards
1 Background	Where and when? Who faced unfair treatment? What was the setting?	A/C
2 Causes	Longer problems and earlier requests. How did the arrest help trigger action?	A/B
3 Key events in order	Choose at least three dated events. Keep the court route and shared effort clear.	B/C/D/E
4 Consequences	One result by the end and one effect in later years. Explain links.	C/E/F
5 Significance	Why did this campaign matter? Keep the shared work and a limit in view.	D/E/F

A model opening

The bus boycott took place in Montgomery, in Alabama, USA, in 1955–1956. Black riders faced unfair bus seating rules (A). Many local people and groups wanted fairer treatment. This account explains how the campaign grew and why it mattered.

This is a model opening only, newly written for this lesson. It sets the place, time and problem. The next paragraphs explain causes, dated events, effects and significance. Use the structure for your own words; copying this alone does not meet the outcome.

You may point, write, type, speak privately or direct a scribe. Reading aloud and public answers are optional. You may pass.

Your drafted historical account

Humanities | GROW | Spring 1 Week 5 | HUM-GROW-S1-W05

How did the campaign grow, and why did it matter?

Use your plan to draft five short paragraphs in your book. Keep at least three dated events in order and explain links. Keep the separate legal route, shared work, significance and a limit.

A frame you may use

1 Background: In ____ during ____, ____. 2 Causes: People wanted change because ____ (A). Parks's arrest on ____ helped trigger ____ (B). 3 Key events: On ____, ____. Then ____, ____. Later ____, ____ (codes __). The court case also ____ (D). 4 Consequences: One result was ____ because ____. In later years, ____ (E/F). 5 Significance: The campaign mattered because ____. Many people and legal action ____. However, ____ (F).

Check and improve

Have you included all five parts? Are dates in order? Have you explained a cause and result, not just used then? Is the court case distinct from protest? Does the final paragraph explain why the campaign mattered and a limit?

Keep card codes and your own words. Use the dates and connectives bank beside your book. Make one edit and give a reason. You may type or direct a scribe.

Use the quiet signal to ask the adult for a pause. Use the agreed supervised place. No public reason is needed. Return with one small card check or a private recap when ready.
