The comparison

Clear, meaningful headings help the reader locate joining facts. Both layouts must contain accurate information. Bold or larger text alone is not evidence that a heading style has been applied.

Model for source A

A model-making group

Who can join

Beginners can join. No skill is needed yet.

What we do

We sketch ideas. We build paper models.

Model for source B

A music group

Who can join

Beginners can join. You can start with a simple beat.

What we do

We listen to short tunes. We clap and copy rhythms.

These are models, not the only correct answers. Accept accurate rewording and meaningful alternative headings. Check the pupil’s choices and source accuracy.

Staff checks and next steps

Year A | Autumn 2 Week 2 | 9 November 2026

Optional extra section

Taking part is a suitable heading. Source A: We take turns with the materials. We share ideas respectfully. Source B: We take turns to lead. We listen when another person has a turn. Keep the main heading level consistent.

Paragraph and style checks

A paragraph groups sentences about one topic. Check the text role in the style controls for each heading. A large font, a colour change or underlining does not on its own show correct structural styling. The title and body text use their appropriate styles.

Useful next-step prompts

Which heading fits this fact? Could your reader find who can join? Does this sentence match the source? Where does the sentence end? Can you show the heading style? What did you change after the reader test?

Evidence decisions

Seen: the pupil demonstrates the action or explains an accurate choice. Supported: record the action and actual prompt or scribing. Not yet seen: the action did not occur or the device was unavailable. Do not award an individual check from a partner’s document.

Save and revision

The intended text must appear after reopening the saved file. If using v2, retain v1, open both and identify the specific improvement. A changed file name alone is not proof that the content improved.
