Purpose and source

Exact outcome: Produce a poster or display showing the range of products and services provided by different hospitality businesses. Source: Medium Term Plan!D7 and Lesson register!F9. This is Autumn 2 Week 2 Mission. Actual teaching date remains blank.

The learner makes their own A3 poster or display panel, then circles possible ideas for the later café. The source classroom checks are at least four products, four services, two business types and every item labelled.

Timing

Arrival 4; starter 2; I Do 5; We Do 5; You Do 18, split practice 12 and evidence 6; tidy/file 4; exit 2. Total 40 minutes. Reference slides are untimed. Check the criteria at ten minutes into the individual task and record independence.

Before the lesson

Bring each learner’s checked sort and display plan. Prepare A3 paper or display panels, safe scissors, glue, supplied magazines/brochures/menus/leaflets and pre-cut access materials. Labelled cut outs are available as support. An adult uses approved camera equipment for evidence.

If flat illustrations replace the workbook’s printed-media format, state this as an access/source adaptation; do not claim a real brochure or menu was used when it was not. No food is prepared in this lesson.

Classification and modelling

The workbook teaches room as a product but suggests “can you hold it?” as the test. This lesson keeps the room as a bookable hotel offer sold to a guest, with booking and cleaning as services. Holding is a clue for many physical products, not a defining rule. A room/stay combines an offer and services. Accept a well-reasoned alternative classification and record the reason; do not mark a learner wrong merely for noticing the mixed offer.

Show a labelled and an unlabelled model. Model cutting or selecting, placing and labelling three items. Emphasise business type, item name and product/service wording. Decorative quality is secondary to a readable range and accurate explanation.

Evidence and ownership

VOC2-L2-E1 includes the individual A3 poster/display, its classroom checklist and actual photo reference. The learner chooses the items, categories and café ideas. Adults may pre-cut, read or scribe exact words and place materials to the learner’s direction, with support recorded.

The workbook calls this the second part of its mapped activity. Do not treat a blank template, copied teaching model or planned duration as completed individual evidence. Exact official criterion wording and edition equivalence remain [VERIFY] unless separately confirmed.

Teaching and access

Arrival: the breakfast food is a product and serving it is a service; range means variety; make scissors safe through adult help; labels tell the reader what an item represents. Hinge: eight unlabelled pictures from one business do not meet the workbook classroom checks.

Supported uses pre-cut images and a label bank; MCQ access places labelled items under business headings. Independent designs the layout. Aspire matches products/services to job roles and explains a café idea. Check at ten minutes, name the actual gap and ask the learner to improve it.

Regulation and learner voice

BLUE low energy; GREEN ready; AMBER tense; RED overwhelmed. Offer water, quiet breathing, a brief pause or a quieter seat without requiring a public colour disclosure. Privately agree one return action.

Individual stations; no pair work or cold calling. Adults may read, rephrase or scribe exact learner words and record support. They do not choose the learner’s assessed sort, labels or explanation. Only VF, WS, I, NS, E and R are used; confirm local code definitions before marking. Blank templates and copied models are not completed individual evidence.

Lundy Space: individual workstation. Voice: the learner selects range and café ideas. Audience: the adult reads the labels and listens to an explanation. Influence: the learner makes one specific improvement after feedback.

Café link and recording

Circled café items are proposals, not an approved menu. Later checks will cover suitability, ingredients, costs, equipment and permissions. Do not infer a practical-food commitment or a pupil’s answer.

Planned hospitality time is 40 minutes. Actual date, active minutes, evidence reference, support and initials remain blank until taught. Follow the workbook’s agreed-Plan rule and keep Careers minutes separate. File actual work in the evidence app.
