

Challenging career stereotypes

What should we use to judge whether a job is worth exploring?

I can identify a stereotype about work and explain that people should be judged by skills and interests.

Use your own safe examples or the fictional case. Share only what you choose.

Words that help

STEREOTYPE

A fixed assumption about a group of people.

REQUIREMENT

Something genuinely needed for a particular role or task.

Start here

Which tells us more: a person's gender or what they can do?

A task needs safe tool use. Is that linked to the work?

Choose evidence / assumption.

Ask about the work

A stereotype guesses from group identity.

A fairer judgement uses relevant skills, interests and task evidence.

Training and access needs must be explored individually.

Does challenging stereotypes mean no training is needed?

Meet Noor — fictional trainee technician

Noor enjoys finding faults and follows a checking sequence.

Noor uses a wheelchair and a bench arranged for access.

A comment says: “Disabled people cannot do technical work.”

What is the assumption? What evidence should we use?

Requirement or assumption?

“This task needs careful checking.”

“Only men can repair things.”

“This task needs following a safe sequence.”

Which statement is the stereotype?

Choose a fairer sentence

A: “Anyone can do any job without training.”

B: “Explore the person’s skills, interests, requirements and support.”

Which avoids both a stereotype and an unrealistic promise?

Your three tasks

1. Sort four statements: Write requirement / stereotype and explain one.
2. Challenge the comment: Use Noor's card. Replace the group assumption with evidence.
- 3. Make an exploration card: Choose Noor or another supplied fictional example.

Use the worksheet and resource cards. Work one task at a time.

Check and improve

I can recognise an unfair group assumption.

I can name real tasks or skills relevant to a role.

I can explain why identity alone does not decide suitability.
