

All About Me: a private celebration

Today: bring learning together in a character profile or an optional private personal profile.

Sharing and display are choices. A fictional response counts fully.

What can a celebration recognise besides a perfect finished task?

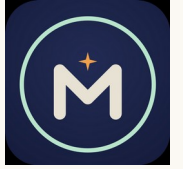

Words that help

REFLECTION

Thinking about learning and what may help next.

EVIDENCE

An example supporting a claim.

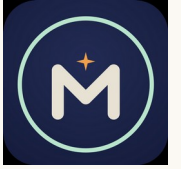

Six themes we have actually studied

Strengths with evidence; feelings without guessing; belonging and pupil voice.

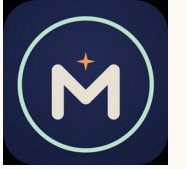

Flexible regulation support; trusted help routes; kindness, fairness and boundaries.

Use the printed Morgan profile if earlier worksheets are unavailable.

Six themes we have actually studied — continued

Which theme helps someone ask for a change to a club?

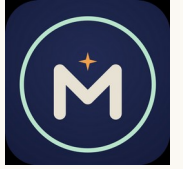

Find and fix the claim

A: “Help only counts if you cope alone first.”

B: “A smile proves someone is happy.”

C: “A kind offer must allow a no.”

Which claim is sound? Improve the other two.

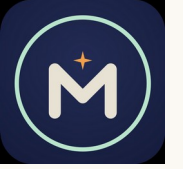

Meet Morgan: our fictional learner

Morgan checks a failed model against a diagram, asks for help and changes one part.

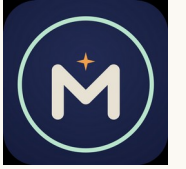

At the club, Morgan asks for written instructions and suggests a quieter idea-sharing option.

Morgan offers a spare pencil, then respects another person's “no, thanks”.

Meet Morgan: our fictional learner — continued

Which themes already have evidence in these actions?

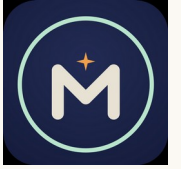

We do: claim plus evidence

Theme: strengths. Claim: Morgan can solve problems with support.

Evidence: Morgan checked a diagram and changed one part of a model.

Possible next step: explain the change with two labels and a model to copy.

What makes this stronger than “Morgan is brilliant”?

Six short learning panels

Use Morgan's cards to complete strengths, feelings, belonging, regulation, support and kindness panels.

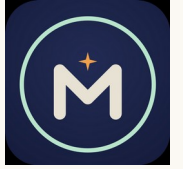

For each: give one idea and one piece of evidence or safe next action.

Choose writing, drawing with labels, speaking, pointing or an adult scribe.

Six short learning panels — continued

Which card supports each panel?

Review one answer, then plan a step

Choose one response to read back or have read to you.

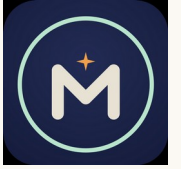

Add a useful word, evidence or a clearer help route.

Choose one small next step and the support needed; no promise to feel or behave a certain way is required.

Review one answer, then plan a step — continued

What could Morgan improve in “I will get better at everything”?

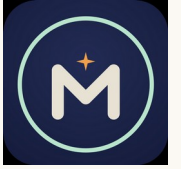

Your view about this unit

Space: you have an inclusive chance to think about the lessons. Voice: you may suggest a change by drawing, writing, speaking or with support.

Audience: the teacher will consider suggestions about future teaching.

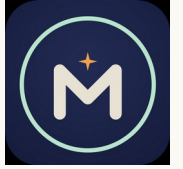

Influence: you should hear the decision and reasons.

A private comment or choosing not to comment is allowed.

Your view about this unit — continued

What change would help a fictional future learner?

Choose your celebration route

Keep the profile private; share one selected idea with an adult; or choose one non-personal section for a display.

No public presentation, photograph, applause or display is required.

Your learning and your access needs can be recognised without sharing your life.

Choose your celebration route — continued

Which route gives you enough choice today?

A useful next step

Finish for Morgan or a fictional future learner: “One thing I can explain is _____. A next step could be _____. Support could be _____.”

Help remains available after the unit ends.

How can the next step stay achievable?