Teamwork in a Vocational Setting

Purpose and preparation

Teamwork in a Vocational Setting

I can take a clear role in a team task.

I can support a teammate.

I can describe what good teamwork looks like.

Prepare: book, pencil, printed cards, word page and one task guide per pupil. Have an accessible seated option. No login or connection is needed.

This is one lesson. Suggested time: 40 minutes. Adjust for access; do not rush the practical checks.

Safety: The screen describes steps only. Any practical task is off screen, authorised and supervised. The adult checks the space, kit, water and task rules first. Use no hot, sharp, powered or chemical kit without the specific controls and training. Stop for spills or damaged kit. Dry card rehearsal remains available and is recorded as rehearsal.

Arrival and starter

Arrival - 4 minutes: Read the goal. Offer a quiet start and the usual aid. Show the picture without reading its labels. Invite the three recall answers in any mode. Keep the first-try count separate from later learning. A pass is welcome.

Starter - 4 minutes: Read the four case steps. Use the silent lights one at a time. Ask what comes next and why. Take the class vote; receive the reason before confirming the order.

Modelling and hinge

I do - 7 minutes: Reveal one task step at a time. Think aloud: I am the checker. I count three tool and kit cards. The pot has no label. I tell the label maker and ask what help they want. They choose the words. I check again. I supported the team without doing their role for them. Ask the hinge question before revealing the answer.

Hinge: Two people make labels and nobody checks. What helps?

Expected: Agree roles so each part gets done. A checker finds gaps before the task ends.

If a response is wrong or absent, check access first. Model one example, offer two choices and retest with a changed case. Move on when each pupil can show the key check.

Team rehearsal and independent work

We do - 7 minutes: Pass the pointer: a team member points to a task card. The next names the role that does it. Another gives a kind way to offer help. Swap roles each round. The teacher moves between teams and accepts signs or paper choices. Scoring: 1 point for a role matched to its task; 1 point for a useful offer of help that leaves the choice with the teammate. Every team can score. Ask one pupil per team to explain a check. If pupils need more help, return to one modelled example and retest privately.

Independent - 14 minutes: Offer the three routes as choices of support and depth. Read the book line. Keep the optional making choice optional. Observe each pupil, fade one prompt when secure and record actual help.

In your book, record your role, what you did and how you supported a teammate. Record the help you used.

Review exit and evidence

Exit - 4 minutes: Use the three exit questions. Ask for a success and a next step. Read back any scribed words for the pupil to confirm. Use the response to choose the next support or task.

Next we name tools and explain safe use, cleaning and storage.

Evidence: record the individual action, response mode, task standard and exact support. A quiz score, group product or paper simulation does not prove practical competence. Use the unit award only where authorised and supported by actual evidence.

Feedback: receive the pupil response, give one next step and invite an edit in the same colour, on the same page or usual mode. Keep the original response visible.

Prompt ladder: wait; point to the guide; ask a short question; rephrase; give two choices; model the first step; return the task to the pupil.
