Resilience & Change

Values and resilience

A value is an idea about what matters.

Resilience can include asking for help or changing a plan.

A private experience is not needed.

Sources of ideas

Christian stewardship can guide care for the world.

Sikh seva can guide service and equal welcome.

Humanists may use reason and care to reduce harm.

Thinking about a setback

The invented club cannot use its first display format.

Choose care, fairness or effort for today.

How could this value guide a manageable next step?

Evidence of learning

Use the six short review items.

Give your own reasons, details and checks.

Each learner gives a separate response.

Earlier work counts when the actual evidence can be checked.

Six outcomes to review

Part	Outcome	Evidence prompt
1	Care for the world	Your reason and action
2	Describe a practice using vocabulary	Your accurate words
3	Investigate care for people and planet	Your choice and reasons
4	Respond to a belief visitor	Your question and response
5	Reflect on values and resilience	Your view and next step
6	Belief and resilience review	Named reason and self-review

Choose evidence you can explain. A gap becomes a next step.

Our reflection

A value that matters to me is ____.

It could guide a next step by ____.

A belief or worldview example is ____.

Use a safe example or the invented learner.

Your response

Supported: hear one item at a time and explain a choice.

Independent: answer the review items in your own words.

Aspire: compare reasons and explain a limit.

Record help honestly. Choose one next learning step.

Review and exit

Which response shows your learning?

What is one next step for you?

Success does not depend on sharing a religious belief.
