Values and resilience review reading cards

Pink supported print

Values and a small change

A value is an idea about what matters. Care, fairness and effort are examples we can discuss. In an invented club, a plan changes. The group cannot use the first display format. It can pause, ask for help and try a suitable format. Resilience means finding a way to keep going or adapt after a setback. It can include support and a rest. It does not mean hiding feelings or solving everything alone.

A safe reflection

Choose a low-risk value for today's task, such as care or fairness. Explain how it could guide a next step in the invented club. If you prefer, discuss a made-up learner's choice instead of your own. You do not need to share private beliefs, a difficult experience or anything about home. A reflection gives a reason. It can say what might help, what still needs checking and who could give support.

Ideas we have learned about

Some Christians understand care for creation as stewardship. Humanists have a non-religious worldview and may use reason, evidence and care for wellbeing. Sikh teaching values equality and seva, or selfless service. Langar is a free community meal open to all. People within each worldview can differ. Our printed Sikhism visitor was invented for learning. We can respond thoughtfully by using a detail from an answer and asking a respectful question. No real visit is claimed.

Showing what we understand

The review has six short items. Each learner gives their own answers, even after pair discussion. You can speak, point with an explanation, use your book or use a scribe. An adult records help honestly. Earlier work counts only when the actual response, date and support can be checked. A blank space means evidence is still needed. It does not mean the learner has failed as a person. This review checks understanding and reasons, not whether a belief is true or whether you hold it. Choose one useful next step at the end.

Learn about these ideas without sharing your own belief. An adult can reread a short part.

Cards to discuss

A

Some Christians may care for the world as God's creation. They may describe this responsibility as stewardship.

B

Humanism is a non-religious worldview. Humanists may use reason, evidence and care for wellbeing when considering a choice.

C

In Sikhism, seva means selfless service. Langar is a free community meal open to all and can express equality.

D

The printed invented Sikhism answer says people of any religion or background can share a free meal at langar. No real visitor is represented.

E

The invented club's first display format cannot be used. A learner could pause, ask for help and try a suitable new format.

F

Care, fairness and effort are low-risk values for this task. You may reflect using a made-up learner instead of a private experience.
