Rights & responsibilities at work.

Suggested answers concern invented examples. They are not learner observations or automatic judgements. Accept any safe, accurate explanation supported by the source.

Model and scenario keys

Card A links the worker's entitlement to an itemised payslip with the employer's duty to provide it. Do not accept 'a favour for good work'. Actual entitlement must be checked against the person's employment status; no real pay details are collected.

Card B is an example of reasonable care and reporting. A learner need not move an obstruction themselves: their safe action depends on training and the situation. The employer still manages the risk. No real obstacle is created for this task.

For C, a useful response is: 'I have not had the training for this equipment. Please show me the safe method before I start.' It identifies the training gap and asks the supervisor for a safe next step. If there is immediate danger, move away and get help. Do not require an argument or a promise to continue.

Card D concerns agreed timekeeping and contact arrangements. Accept a brief factual message through the agreed route. No learner must share a real reason for absence. Entitlement to leave or adjustments is not decided by this invented card.

For E, the refusal raises a disability discrimination concern; employers have reasonable-adjustment duties where required. Do not equate all unpleasant treatment with unlawful discrimination. Accept a calm factual note and private help request. The lesson does not determine an individual legal claim.

F is incorrect because lateness does not erase safety duties. Separate a behaviour concern from the worker's protections. A good explanation names both the timekeeping arrangement and the continuing training need.

Evidence can be a short written response, an exact scribed response checked by the learner, an oral explanation recorded by staff, or a marked card sort plus a reason. Each learner needs an individual contribution; the partner's correct response is not their evidence. Keep first try, feedback and response where produced.

A safe further-help route starts with a supervisor or trusted adult. If unresolved or involving that person, seek another appropriate contact and independent employment advice. Do not give guarantees, request a personal disclosure or name a real employer. Staff follow the usual safeguarding route for a real concern.

A

The invented paper-pack business gives a worker a payslip showing pay and deductions.

Suggested answer: A worker right or protection, and an employer responsibility. Workers are entitled to an itemised payslip. The employer provides the pay record. The same event links a right with a duty.

B

A worker sees paper across a walkway. They keep away from the obstruction and tell the supervisor instead of ignoring it.

Suggested answer: Worker responsibility, with an employer safety responsibility too. The worker takes care and reports a hazard. The employer must manage the risk and arrange safe action. Reporting does not transfer the employer's responsibility to the worker.

C

A new worker is told to use unfamiliar equipment immediately. They have not had the training needed for the task.

Suggested answer: Ask for the safety information and training needed before doing the task. The employer must manage the risk and provide necessary training. The worker should pause rather than guess, explain the concern and ask the supervisor for a safe next step. No equipment is used here.

D

A worker will miss the agreed start-time. They use the agreed contact procedure, explain the relevant facts and ask what to do next.

Suggested answer: Worker responsibility under the workplace arrangements. Communicating a delay helps the employer plan. It does not mean a delayed worker loses their legal protections. Do not ask learners to disclose actual absence or family circumstances.

E

A supervisor refuses training to a worker because of that worker's disability, without considering what would make the training accessible.

Suggested answer: A concern about discrimination and access that needs help. The law protects against disability discrimination at work, and employers have duties to make reasonable adjustments where required. A safe response is to record the relevant facts and seek help privately. Do not ask the learner to confront anyone or diagnose a real case.

F

A supervisor says, 'You were late yesterday, so you have no right to safety training today.'

Suggested answer: The statement is wrong. Safety duties still apply. A timekeeping issue does not remove the employer's safety duties or the worker's protections. The worker should raise the training concern and use a safe help route; staff can discuss timekeeping separately.

Checks evidence and misconceptions

Check after I do

In the model, who has a safety responsibility: only the worker, only the employer, or both? Give one example.

Both. The employer manages the risk and provides necessary training; the worker takes care, follows training and reports the concern. Accept one accurate duty for each.

Main hinge

A worker has not had the training needed for unfamiliar equipment. Which is the best response?

A. Guess the method so the order is finished quickly.

B. Pause the task, explain the training gap and ask the supervisor for a safe next step.

C. Say the employer has no responsibility because workers must take care.

Key: B. Check each learner privately. If either chooses A or C, revisit the model and ask who does what. Use the parallel hinge before independent work. An accurate choice needs a short safety reason; reading fluency is not assessed.

Parallel hinge

A worker was late yesterday. Today a supervisor refuses the training needed for the worker's task. Which statement is accurate?

A. The worker loses safety protections after being late.

B. The worker must use the equipment to prove effort.

C. Timekeeping can be discussed separately; the employer's safety duties still apply.

Key: C. Accept C with the reason that rights and safety duties are not rewards. If uncertain, give a two-choice oral version and model the first step only. Record support and revisit; do not force a public answer.

Misconceptions

Mistaken idea	Correction
Rights are rewards for good attendance and effort.	Rights and legal protections are not earned by perfect behaviour. Discuss a behaviour issue separately from the protection.
If workers must take care, the employer is no longer responsible for safety.	Both have duties. The employer manages risks and provides necessary training; the worker takes care and follows training.
Every unfair-feeling decision is unlawful discrimination.	Unlawful discrimination has a legal meaning. Record the relevant facts and seek help rather than deciding a real claim from a short story.

Judgement and feedback

Review the learner’s own reasoning, source use and safe action. Do not infer competence from attendance, confidence, reading fluency or a partner’s answer. Classroom evidence cannot prove real employment, pay entitlement or a completed placement. VF verbal feedback · WS worked with support · I independent · NS next step · // self-edit · ? read this back to me · E saved evidence · R responded. Keep the first try, one NS and the learner reply. Record R only after Voice and Audience are clear and the learner responds to NS in the same colour, on the same page or usual mode. Offer to the Communication portfolio. Staff confirm any mapping to the unit award; no award completion is implied.

Use voice, writing, pointing, a usual aid, typing or an exact scribe. Read back and correct. Plan in any language. Ask a trusted adult privately; pass, pause and return with support. No personal work or family story is needed.
