Invented model and key ideas

All stories are made up. Use the characters only. No personal stories, family details, accounts, appearance ratings or real incidents are needed. Pair talk is optional. No acted conflict or pupil casualty practice.

A changed collection plan

In an invented family, one parent cares for a child. The parent has to change a collection plan. The parent tells the agreed adult, checks that the child will be with a safe adult and explains the change calmly. The child can ask questions. The adult sorts out the plan.

Worked reason

The parent shows care by making a safe plan and giving clear information. The adult is responsible for the child getting safe care. A change does not mean that care has ended. The child does not have to solve the adult problem. A safe commitment includes keeping promises where possible and explaining a safe change.

Ideas to keep in view

• Families take different forms. Safe care and respect matter in each form.

• Adults are responsible for a child's care, safety and needs. Children are not responsible for fixing adult problems.

• Commitment can mean reliable care, keeping safe promises and explaining changes. Asking for support can help.

• A promise must never block help about safety. A trusted adult or the safeguarding lead can help; try another trusted adult if needed.

Use words, pointing, drawing, typing or the usual communication aid. An adult may scribe the learner's exact words and read them back. Plan in any language. Record access aids separately from prompts that supplied content.

Invented cases for the pair

Care across two homes

A child in an invented family spends time in two homes. The adults agree who will help with a health appointment and who will collect the child. They share the plan without asking the child to carry messages. They listen when the child has a question.

• Which two actions show care or responsibility?

• Why is it helpful for the adults to share the plan?

• Would this family need the same shape as the model family to show commitment? Explain.

A relative gives care

In another invented family, a relative is the main carer. The carer prepares food, checks that the child has what they need and asks a trusted adult for help with a new routine. The child is offered a small, age-suitable choice about their own activity. The carer stays responsible for safety.

• Which tasks belong to the adult?

• Does asking for safe support show a lack of commitment? Give a reason.

• How can the adult listen to the child while keeping responsibility?

Reader A spots a clue. Checker B explains a reason. Swap for the next case. Use books or usual aids for each learner's own answer. Working alone is valid.

Safe choices and private check

A promise that needs help

In a third invented family, an adult says that commitment means a child must keep quiet about anything that makes the child feel unsafe. The child is unsure. A trusted member of staff is available for a private talk. The safeguarding lead can help with the concern.

• Is keeping quiet about feeling unsafe a safe meaning of commitment?

• Which safe adult route could the child use?

• What could happen if the first trusted adult is not available?

Private hinge

An invented carer asks a safe adult for help so a child is cared for. Which answer fits?

A. Asking for support always shows a lack of commitment.

B. Safe support can help the carer meet the child's needs.

C. The child must take over all the adult tasks.

Give one reason privately. An adult can read the choices. Use words, pointing or the usual aid.

A safe help route

A character can tell a trusted adult or the safeguarding lead privately. If the first adult is away or does not help, try another trusted adult. If there is danger now, get urgent help. No one needs to prove a worry before asking for help.

Visible model

The child does not have to solve the adult problem. A safe commitment includes keeping promises where possible and explaining a safe change.

Pause card

I would like to use my agreed pause.

Use the agreed pause signal. No public reason is needed. An adult supports the agreed supervised route, a neutral task and a supported return. A learner may pass, observe or catch up privately. Keep supervision in place.

Private help opener

A character could say: Can I talk privately? I need help with a safety worry.

A character can tell a trusted adult or the safeguarding lead privately. If the first adult is away or does not help, try another trusted adult. If there is danger now, get urgent help. No one needs to prove a worry before asking for help.

Learning review

In your book, choose Ready to explain, With a prompt or Need another example for each learning point. All choices start blank. This is a learning check, not a judgement about health, family life or safety. Pass is valid.

Keep the first try. Use one next step and respond in the usual mode. No personal detail is needed.
