Staff answers and cover notes

Suggested responses for fictional cases. Accept other safe, reasoned responses. Do not infer a learner's personal circumstances from classroom work.

Key teaching points

• Body image concerns thoughts and feelings about the body. People deserve respect whatever they look like. The class does not rate or compare bodies.

• An advert may try to sell an item by promising feelings or approval. Separate the item description from a promise and ask what evidence supports it.

• A post may show a selected view. In the supplied story, the source note shows omitted practice and help. One post cannot show a whole life; this does not make every post false.

• A body neutral rewrite describes the item or activity without judging looks. If a message causes worry or hurt, the invented learner can stop engaging and ask a trusted adult or the safeguarding lead for help.

Vocabulary

Body image: The thoughts and feelings a person has about their body. A person's worth does not depend on looks.

Self-esteem: How a person values and respects themselves. It can change, and support can help.

Media: Messages shared in print or on screens, such as adverts and posts.

Selected: Chosen from a larger set. A selected post leaves some things out.

Sales claim: A promise used to help sell something. A promise still needs evidence.

Worked model

The message links buying a kit and looking a certain way with feeling sure. It gives no proof. A kit cannot promise how someone will feel each day. The learner's worth does not depend on looks or buying it. A fair rewrite is: 'This kit has craft materials. People can enjoy making things in different ways.' The learner could pause the advert and talk to a trusted adult.

Starter claim

A polished post proves that a person is always happy or confident.

A selected post cannot show a full life or every feeling. Use the supplied source note for this case; do not guess about real people.

Case answers and checks

A promise in a made up advert

Two brightness settings describes the item within this invented card. 'Everyone will like you' is a sales promise, with no evidence that a light can make everyone like a person. Accept: 'This light has two settings for taking a photo.' It must not link buying the light to worth, popularity or a required look. The learner can leave the advert and ask a trusted adult if the message causes worry.

A selected post

The post leaves out other tries, practice and help. One chosen picture and caption cannot show every part of a day or prove that a person always feels sure. The supplied source note supports this answer in this story; do not assume every real post is edited or false. Accept: 'One chosen moment after practice. Asking for help is fine.' No pupil should compare their appearance or life with the invented creator.

A kind response to a hurtful reply

The inclusive reply respects people without judging looks. The learner can stop engaging, move away from the item and tell a trusted adult. Adult help can support a suitable mute, block or report step if needed. They do not have to reply, prove their worth, confront anyone or copy and spread the hurtful item. If the first adult is unavailable or does not help, another trusted adult or the safeguarding lead can help.

Hinge and decision

Main key B: The card gives no evidence for the promise about being liked. It does not define anyone's worth. It also does not prove that every advert is false.

Parallel key A: A selected moment leaves other events and feelings unseen. The learner can pause rather than compare bodies or lives.

Check privately. Proceed with a safe reason from each learner. If unsafe or unclear, re-model, use the parallel check and guide the next case. Keep normal access aids. A pass needs a later opportunity, not a negative inference.

Misconception response

A person must change their looks or buy an item to deserve respect.

Everyone deserves respect. Looks, approval and purchases do not decide a person's worth. A kind response avoids judging bodies.

Delivery boundaries and evidence

Use only the supplied plain text adverts and posts. No photographs of bodies, before and after bodies, filters on pupil images, body measurements, weight, calories, diets, appearance scores or own appearance tasks. Do not invite pupils to name content they have seen or describe their bodies, family habits or personal online lives. Do not debate whether an appearance is good or bad. Explain that body image means thoughts and feelings about a body, not a rating of it. Feelings can vary; avoid promising constant confidence. Pair talk is optional: learner A identifies the claim; learner B asks what the source supports; swap for the next case. Both can work privately with an adult instead. Keep all concerns out of the learning record. A disclosure goes to the safeguarding lead through the school procedure. Listen calmly, do not probe or promise secrecy. Offer the agreed supervised pause and neutral alternative. Help routes are a trusted adult and the safeguarding lead; try another trusted adult if the first is unavailable or unhelpful. No live feed, account, search or real post is needed. Any mapping to the unit award must be checked by staff; classroom evidence does not establish current personal risk.

Route guidance

Supported: Offer the word bank, visible model, short choices and sentence frame. Keep normal aids and record the learner's own choice.

Independent: Keep glossary and usual aids. Learner chooses the evidence, gives a reason and records a next step.

Aspire: Keep normal aids. Compare plausible choices, justify the safer response and adapt a help route. No personal detail or longer writing is required.

Evidence criteria

Media message and evidence: Distinguishes an item fact from an unsupported promise, using an invented card.

Selected view and respectful rewrite: Explains a limit of one post and offers a body neutral line that allows practice or help.

Safe response and help: Chooses a kind response, disengagement and a trusted adult or safeguarding lead route; adds an alternative adult if needed.

Safeguarding and response

Listen calmly to any disclosure. Do not probe, investigate or promise secrecy. Follow the school safeguarding procedure and pass concerns promptly to the safeguarding lead. Use the separate safeguarding record; keep real concerns out of learning evidence. Privately support a learner who cannot identify a trusted adult.

Use the agreed pause signal. No public reason is needed. An adult supports the agreed supervised route, a neutral task and a supported return. A learner may pass, observe or catch up privately. Keep supervision in place.
