

Read it, make it

Today's recipe: chickpea and cucumber wrap.

The page is our guide: read, do, check, tick.

What information do we need before making?

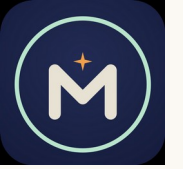

Words that help

METHOD

The ordered actions in a recipe.

INSTRUCTION VERB

An action word such as mash, mix or fold.

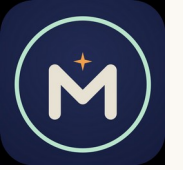

Two parts of a recipe

Ingredients tell us what and how much.

Method tells us what to do and in which order.

Action words include measure, mash, mix, spread and fold.

Is “40 g chickpeas” an ingredient amount or a method?

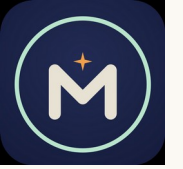

Recipe detectives

Find step 2: measure 40 g chickpeas, then mash.

Find step 3: add 15 g soft cheese and mix.

Find step 5: spread the mixture and add cucumber.

Which must happen before spreading the mixture?

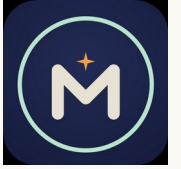

Measure accurately

Put the bowl on the scales and zero the display.

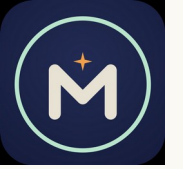

Add 40 g chickpeas. Stop and check before mashing.

Zero again, then add 15 g soft cheese.

Measure accurately — continued

A display reads 55 g after both ingredients, without re-zeroing. Could that total be right?

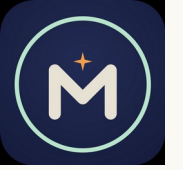

A missing ingredient

The planned cheese is unavailable. Someone suggests a different spread.

The team has not checked its ingredients or storage instructions.

What should the reader/checker do?

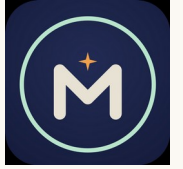

Follow the page

Routine and label check first. Read one step, do it, check it, then tick it.

Ask before using a tool or changing an ingredient.

Keep a clear edge so the wrap can fold and hold its filling.

What is your next written step?

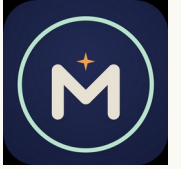

Check the finished wrap

Are the measured components present? Does the filling stay inside on the plate?

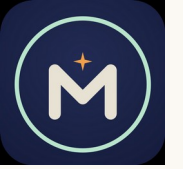

Find one tick backed by an observed action.

If a step was missed, name it and plan the next safe action.

Check the finished wrap — continued

Is it useful to tick a step before doing it?

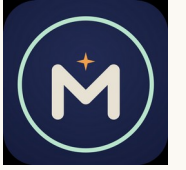

Record, then reset

Record two amounts and the units you used.

Circle two action verbs from your recipe.

Cover/chill the approved portion or serve promptly, then reset.

Which check helped you most?

Scale the recipe

One wrap uses 40 g chickpeas. Two wraps use the same amount each.

How many grams are needed for two?