

Feelings, clues and asking for support

Today: find useful words, avoid guessing and practise a help message.

Use fictional situations. You do not need to report your own mood or body feelings.

Can two people feel differently about the same event?

Words that help

FEELING

An emotional experience, such as worry or excitement.

CLUE

Something we notice that may help us understand.

What changed after your suggestion?

Last lesson you could suggest an access change.

Your teacher will explain what was considered, what changed and any reason something could not change.

Does everyone have an accessible way to answer today?

Words can be more precise

Frustrated: something is blocking what someone wants to do.

Nervous: worried or unsure about what might happen.

Proud: pleased about an effort or achievement.

Which word might fit a character whose file will not open?

One clue, several possibilities

Ari's heart is beating quickly before a performance.

Ari might feel excited, nervous, both, or something else.

Exercise or feeling unwell could also affect the body.

What could a friend ask without making an assumption?

Feeling, action or need?

“I feel frustrated.”

“I tore the paper.”

“I need help to restart.”

Which is the feeling, which is the action and which is a support need?

We do: a clear message

Ari's rehearsal time changes without warning. Ari is unsure where to go.

Message: "I feel unsure. I need the new plan. Can you show me?"

Ari could write, point to "help" or use a device instead.

Which part tells the adult what could help?

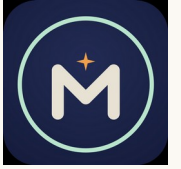

There is no test before help

Kai feels disappointed and would like an adult to sit nearby.

Toni feels unwell and tells an adult immediately.

Dev feels worried every day and asks for more support.

Who is allowed to ask for help?

Your learning record

Task 1: choose possible words and keep uncertainty.

Task 2: separate feeling, action and support need.

Task 3: make a help message for a character.

Use the word cards or your own words.

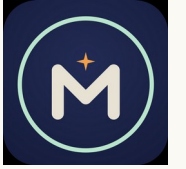

A friend can listen; an adult can help

Ask what the person wants. Do not demand the full story.

If safety is a concern, tell a trusted adult. You do not have to solve it alone.

You can ask for help even if you cannot name the feeling.

Improve: “You look angry, so I know what is wrong.”

A clue is not proof

Lea smiles after a test. A friend says, “That proves Lea feels happy.”

What can we know, and what should we leave open?
