

Trusted help and safe choices

Today: use fictional examples to recognise helpful behaviour and practise asking.

You do not have to name people at home or describe a personal worry.

Can a person ask for help without telling the whole class why?

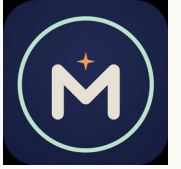

Words that help

TRUSTED ADULT

An adult whose behaviour supports safety and takes concerns seriously.

SUPPORT NETWORK

People and services someone can approach for help.

Look at behaviour, not a title

A safer adult listens, takes a worry seriously and helps find suitable support.

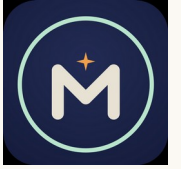

They respect boundaries and explain when they need to involve someone else for safety.

Someone being friendly, familiar or important does not by itself prove they are safe.

Look at behaviour, not a title — continued

Which matters more: a person's job title or how they respond?

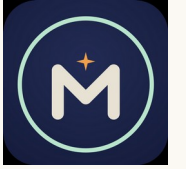

Safer response or warning sign?

A: “Thank you for telling me. Let us find the right help.”

B: “Do not tell anyone; you will get me into trouble.”

C: “I may need to tell our safeguarding lead so we can help keep you safe.”

Which responses help, and which needs another adult?

We do: a short help request

Nico is worried about a message and wants an adult's help.

Nico writes: "I need help with an online message. Can we talk privately?"

Nico can also point to an agreed help card; the adult supports the next step.

What makes the request usable without sharing details publicly?

If the first route does not work

Ms Green is teaching and cannot speak immediately. Nico says, “This feels urgent.”

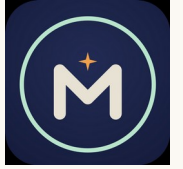

The adult should help Nico reach someone available, such as the pastoral team or safeguarding lead.

If help still does not arrive, Nico can tell another adult. This is not Nico’s fault.

If the first route does not work — continued

What should an adult do rather than leave Nico to manage alone?

Where else can help come from?

Childline: free support for under-19s in the UK about worries. Call 0800 1111 or visit childline.org.uk.

A GP can help with health concerns. YoungMinds provides mental health information and help-finding guidance.

School adults can help a pupil find an appropriate route. A friend can accompany them but need not solve the problem.

Where else can help come from? — continued

Which route could offer information, and which could provide a health appointment?

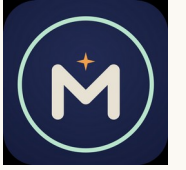

Online concerns and urgent danger

CEOP receives reports about online sexual abuse and grooming. It is not the general route for every online problem.

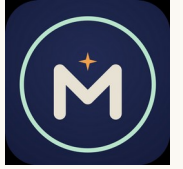

For online bullying, ask a trusted adult and use the platform's reporting route with support.

If someone is in immediate danger, get emergency help: call 999.

Online concerns and urgent danger — continued

Why should we match the route to the concern?

Private does not mean a secret forever

School staff may need to share a safety concern with people who can help.

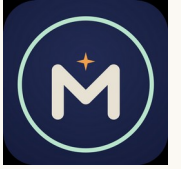

Childline has a confidentiality promise with exceptions for some serious safety concerns and legal requirements.

You can ask: “Who might you need to tell, and what will happen next?”

Private does not mean a secret forever

Can an adult promise to keep every safety concern secret?

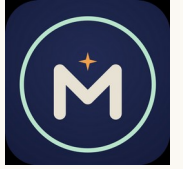

Your learning record

Task 1: identify helpful adult behaviour and a warning sign.

Task 2: match a concern to a suitable route using the service cards.

Task 3: plan Nico's first and backup request.

Check that the plan still works if one adult is unavailable.

Help is an adult responsibility

Nico asked once but the worry was not addressed. Nico thinks, “I must have asked wrongly.”

What should Nico know, and what can happen next?