Introduction to Vocational Skills and Workplaces

Purpose and preparation

Introduction to Vocational Skills and Workplaces

I can name common vocational skills.

I can describe different kinds of workplace.

I can say which vocational skills I already have.

Prepare: book, pencil, printed cards, word page and one task guide per pupil. Have an accessible seated option. No login or connection is needed.

This is one lesson. Suggested time: 40 minutes. Adjust for access; do not rush the practical checks.

Safety: The screen describes steps only. Any practical task is off screen, authorised and supervised. The adult checks the space, kit, water and task rules first. Use no hot, sharp, powered or chemical kit without the specific controls and training. Stop for spills or damaged kit. Dry card rehearsal remains available and is recorded as rehearsal.

Arrival and starter

Arrival - 4 minutes: Read the goal. Offer a quiet start and the usual aid. Show the picture without reading its labels. Invite the three recall answers in any mode. Keep the first-try count separate from later learning. A pass is welcome.

Starter - 4 minutes: Read the four case steps. Use the silent lights one at a time. Ask what comes next and why. Take the class vote; receive the reason before confirming the order.

Modelling and hinge

I do - 7 minutes: Reveal one task step at a time. Think aloud: I helped lay out empty pots for a garden task. I followed the picture steps and put the pots in the right place. An adult read the steps. Following steps is my skill. It can also help me set out cups in a kitchen. Ask the hinge question before revealing the answer.

Hinge: Which is the clearest example of a skill?

Expected: The second answer names the skill and what the person did.

If a response is wrong or absent, check access first. Model one example, offer two choices and retest with a changed case. Move on when each pupil can show the key check.

Team rehearsal and independent work

We do - 7 minutes: Build it blind: one partner can see a four-card skill model. They describe it. The other places paper cards without seeing the model. Check together, then swap. The teacher moves between teams. A pupil may point to clues or pass. Scoring: 1 point for each skill card matched to a fitting task; 1 point for an example of the skill in a second workplace. All teams can score. Ask one pupil per team to explain a check. If pupils need more help, return to one modelled example and retest privately.

Independent - 14 minutes: Offer the three routes as choices of support and depth. Read the book line. Keep the optional making choice optional. Observe each pupil, fade one prompt when secure and record actual help.

In your book, name a skill, a time you used it and a workplace where it helps. Say what help you had.

Review exit and evidence

Exit - 4 minutes: Use the three exit questions. Ask for a success and a next step. Read back any scribed words for the pupil to confirm. Use the response to choose the next support or task.

Next we name safety rules and clean work habits.

Evidence: record the individual action, response mode, task standard and exact support. A quiz score, group product or paper simulation does not prove practical competence. Use the unit award only where authorised and supported by actual evidence.

Feedback: receive the pupil response, give one next step and invite an edit in the same colour, on the same page or usual mode. Keep the original response visible.

Prompt ladder: wait; point to the guide; ask a short question; rephrase; give two choices; model the first step; return the task to the pupil.
