Approved objective and source

Recognise caring relationships and identify an action that shows care.

Owner-approved standalone RSHE outline, 26 October 2026. The approved outline is the weekly source; no separate weekly workbook row is asserted.

Purpose and success checks

What could care look like for a young person?

Match a caring act to a need. Show who could help the young person. Give a reason from the story.

RSHE-BUILD-A2-W01-E1: A caring-action match and a fictional support map, with the learner's explanation and support recorded.

Before pupils arrive

Print both evidence pages and the three support pages. Keep page 1 whole. Cut the six situation cards on page 2 and the role and action cards on page 3; retain the map section. Prepare one model set. Read the fictional family cards without asking for comparisons with real families. Offer quiet individual work, a pass and usual communication aids.

Hinge and reteach

A is supported by the caring action. B is unkind. C removes choice rather than checking what help is wanted. An adult's role alone does not prove that an action is caring. Reteach with the card about waiting while a person speaks; ask what that action allows.

Routes and task

Supported: use two caring-action choices, then make a support map with two supplied role cards and reading or scribing support. Independent: match three caring actions and build the fictional support map, giving one reason from a card. Aspire: explain why a helpful action respects choice and add a second help route if the first adult is unavailable.

Use four minutes to match caring actions to fictional situations. Use five minutes to make a support map for the supplied young person using the tutor and support-adult cards. Use three minutes to explain one caring action and consider the next help route if the first adult is busy. Preserve the first response and any prompted change.

Read aloud, point, scribe exact words or use the usual communication aid. Record support without treating speech speed or handwriting as the target.

Safe teaching and evidence

Boundaries

Every teaching prompt concerns a fictional young person. Never ask learners about their own bodies, families or experiences, or use a real person as the case. Read fictional cards without inviting comparison with home. No touching, body checking, forced eye contact, acting out distress or personal role-play. Allow a pass, quiet response or pause. If a learner raises a personal concern, follow the setting's safeguarding procedure; do not turn the disclosure into lesson evidence. Staff use the setting's agreed support arrangements.

Assessment and feedback

Record the actual situation and caring-action match, a map linking the fictional young person to at least one appropriate support role, and the learner's explanation. The two supplied roles allow a further help route. Record prompts, mode and what remains unshown. Do not require the learner to list or identify anyone in their own life.

Use VF · WS · I · NS+ · // self-edit · ? read back · R responded · E evidence in the evidence record. R requires Voice, Audience, a specific NS+ prompt and the learner response in the same colour, on the same page or usual mode. E is recorded only when actual work is banked. Record prompts and unfinished work. Blank sheets and adult models are not completed learner evidence.

Learner voice and thread tags

Space: calm seating and clear resources. Voice: an optional response about the fictional case. Audience: an adult listens or reads and responds. Influence: record any change to the task support or next teaching step. A pass is respected and does not require an explanation.

S: reflect on a fictional person's needs and choices. M: consider caring and helpful actions. So: listen to different possible responses. IL: respect a choice to pause or use a response aid. MR: respect different families and feelings without ranking people.

Offer to the Communication portfolio

An explanation of a caring action or support-map choice may be offered to the Communication portfolio. Record the learner's actual response about the fictional person and the adult's reply. Staff decide any mapping.
