

Knowledge Organiser (LAUNCH W1): Migration and Identity in Modern Britain

Humanities Aut 1 · 2026–27 · Workbook outcome: Investigate migration & identity in modern Britain (sources).

Key Word	Definition
origin	The diagram above places the census summary table in the centre with four provenance labels around it: origin, date, audience and purpose. The connecting lines indicate which part of the source supplies each label, and the caption at the bottom records that only two of the four are printed on the source itself.
date	The diagram above places the census summary table in the centre with four provenance labels around it: origin, date, audience and purpose. The connecting lines indicate which part of the source supplies each label, and the caption at the bottom records that only two of the four are printed on the source itself.
audience	The diagram above places the census summary table in the centre with four provenance labels around it: origin, date, audience and purpose. The connecting lines indicate which part of the source supplies each label, and the caption at the bottom records that only two of the four are printed on the source itself.
purpose	The diagram above places the census summary table in the centre with four provenance labels around it: origin, date, audience and purpose. The connecting lines indicate which part of the source supplies each label, and the caption at the bottom records that only two of the four are printed on the source itself.
Watch the method:	Watch the method: I read the caption first and label origin and date, because those are printed. I then ask who would use a table like this and why it was compiled, and I label audience and purpose as inferences, marking them with a question mark until the annotation confirms them. Printed labels first, inferred labels second, and the difference recorded.
establishes	The diagram above sets out three boxes, establishes, suggests and cannot establish, and every annotation you write today must name the box its claim has earned; a claim that can be pointed to on the source belongs in the first, a claim argued from provenance in the second, and everything beyond the source in the third.
suggests	The diagram above sets out three boxes, establishes, suggests and cannot establish, and every annotation you write today must name the box its claim has earned; a claim that can be pointed to on the source belongs in the first, a claim argued from provenance in the second, and everything beyond the source in the third.
cannot establish	The diagram above sets out three boxes, establishes, suggests and cannot establish, and every annotation you write today must name the box its claim has earned; a claim that can be pointed to on the source belongs in the first, a claim argued from provenance in the second, and everything beyond the source in the third.

Key Facts

- A source establishes only what can be pointed to on it; everything beyond that is either an inference the source supports or a claim it cannot carry.
- Identity is layered rather than singular, and a source usually records one layer, such as country of birth, while remaining silent about the others.

Arrival Task

Retrieving what a source can carry

1) A source establishes only what can be pointed to on it; everything beyond that is either an inference the source supports or a claim it cannot carry.

2) Identity is layered rather than singular, and a source usually records one layer, such as country of birth, while remaining silent about the others.

Why does provenance change what the content means?

Consider two readings of the same recruitment poster. Reading A: “The poster shows that Britain welcomed workers from the Caribbean in the 1950s.” Reading B: “The poster shows that one transport employer, short of staff in the 1950s, chose to advertise for workers in the Caribbean; whether Britain as a whole welcomed them is a separate question the poster cannot answer.”

We Do 1: Label the poster together

Element 1: the caption names a transport employer as the producer. Which provenance label does that supply?

Element 2: the poster was displayed in Caribbean towns in the 1950s. Which label does that supply, and is it printed or inferred?

Element 3: the wording invites readers to apply for skilled work in London. Which label does that supply?

We Do 2: Annotate one identity claim together

We annotate one claim on the board before anyone writes: each learner records a single claim about identity drawn from the census table on a whiteboard, together with the box it has earned, and only when every board is raised do we compare and agree the box.

Scaffolding – Standard

Your route

Label the provenance of all three sources, marking printed and inferred elements, and annotate each with one claim it establishes and one it cannot establish about identity, one row per source.

"Who ... what they do ... so that ..." | "... because ..."

The model

Watch the method: I read the caption first and label origin and date, because those are printed. I then ask who would use a table like this and why it was compiled, and I label audience and purpose as inferences, marking them with a question mark until the annotation confirms them. Printed labels first, inferred labels second, and the difference recorded.

Repairing it together: rewrite the claim as “the passenger list cannot establish how the passengers understood their own identity, although the nationality law of the same year gave them the legal status of British subjects.” The claim is now the size of the evidence and points to a second source for the part the first cannot carry.

Check yourself

- Check yourself: does every annotation name the box its claim has earned?
- Check yourself: can you point to the source for everything in the establishes column?

Migration and Identity in Modern Britain

SoW: 'LAUNCH Weekly - Autumn'!C46 — "Investigate migration & identity in modern Britain (sources)."

Learning objective: I can label the provenance of sources about migration and annotate what each establishes, suggests and cannot establish about identity in modern Britain.

No learner discloses their own heritage, nationality, faith or family history. Every task is completed from the supplied sources and their printed provenance captions.

The provenance and annotation row

Source → provenance labels (printed or inferred) → the box each claim has earned.

The first row is completed for you from the source we annotated together and is set in italics so that it is not mistaken for your own; complete as many of the rows below it as you can.

Independent Work – Standard

Three sources labelled and annotated, one row each.

Label the provenance of all three sources, marking printed and inferred elements, and annotate each with one claim it establishes and one it cannot establish about identity, one row per source.

Source and provenance	Claim about identity	Establishes, suggests or cannot establish?
2011 census table · origin and date printed, audience and purpose inferred	about one resident in eight was born outside the UK	establishes

Choose a route

1. I chose my own route.
2. My annotations are in my own words.
3. Any adult help is written on the record.

5 · Learner confirmation

I confirm this is my own work.

Exit Ticket – Standard

1) Read one annotation to a partner or an adult; the listener repeats the box they heard in their own words.

2) If the listener heard "establishes" where you meant "suggests", change that single word; the change is your influence and belongs to you rather than to the listener.

3) SPACE stays available, VOICE is received, AUDIENCE names back exactly and INFLUENCE changes one real next action.
